GAVEL FROM OLD HISTORIC PISGAH CHURCH PRESENTED

THE FIRST METHODIST EDIFICE
SOUTH OF DUCK RIVER FURNISHES WOOD.

ACCEPTED BY BISHOP KILGO

Speech of Presentation is Made by J. I. Finney, Editor of The Herald—Will Be Placed in Archives of the Tennessee Conference.

An interesting event of the morning session of the Methodist Conference today was the presentation of a gavel from the first Methodist church building ever erected south of Duck river. The gavel was made from a piece of timber from the church at old Pisgah near Hampshire which was founded by John Akin in 1807.

The gavel was presented by J. I. Finney, editor of The Herald, and was accepted by Bishop Kilgo in behalf of the conference in a feeling response.

The gavel was fashioned from the timber by the Vaughan Manufacturing Company of this city. In presenting the gavel, Mr. Finney said:

"When the hardy pioneers blazed a pathway through the trackless wilderness from the Appalachian mountains westward there accompanied them often with rifle in one hand and Bible in the other, the Methodist preachers. They were frequently the first and always among the first spiritual comforters of the new settlers. No hardships were too great to deter them; no privations so severe that they were not overcome in their zeal to carry the gospel to every corner of the new and wonderful land.

"Too much could not be said in praise of the hardy Methodist pioneer preachers who braved every danger and willingly submitted to every sacrifice that the cause of Christ should triumph in the new world. The church had its birth in humble surroundings. Its first successful appeals were to the lonely and the oppressed and it is not strange therefore that its message should have taken strong and deep hold upon the brave and simple men who settled this country. In the early days of this territory Methodism literally spread like wild fire, and converts were made wherever the smoke marked a new clearing. Of intense loyalty, great bravery, and simple faith the founders of Methodism in the wilderness were fit leaders of a great people, a people who were to leave their impress forever upon the history of a splendid land.

"First among this devoted band to come to the country South of Duck river was John Akin, whose religious fervor and deep devotion led him to leave his comfortable Carolina home that he might bring the comfort of his faith to the settlements in what are now Maury, Lawrence, Lewis and Wayne counties. Early in the last century he began his ministrations that were destined to result in the establishment of the first church of his faith in all this section. One hundred and three years ago a band of devout followers of the great Wesley, attracted by the simple eloquence of Akin and moved by the intense religious fervor characteristic of the time, assembled at Pisgah Hill on the western borders of this county, where the hills catch the last rays of the setting sun, and there erected and forever dedicated to Almighty God, a Methodist church, and for more than a century that church has proven a blessing to the community and a benediction and means of salvation to the hundreds who have lived within the sphere of its influence. Infinity alone can measure the great harvest eternal that has been gathered through the instrumentality of that man and his great labors.

"The people of that community now, decades after his ashes have mingled with the dust where he preached, reflect in their lives the power of his work. No where in all this land is there to be found a citizenship of superior worth, of more loyal devotion to civic righteousness, of truer faith or greater fidelity to truth and honor than live within the sphere of influence of old Pisgah church. It is a God fearing, God serving community. A community where the people read their Bible and believe its divine message; where they go to church and make an honest effort to do justice to their fellow man; where the people share without complaint the burdens of citizenship, obey the law and gratefully acknowledge the supremacy of the One and Only God.

"The chief glory of Methodism lies in the fact that it has been able to lay

BORNE FRUIT EIGHTY YEARS

AN APPLE TREE ON THE PLACE
CULLEOKA.

The publication of the story about the Kentucky apple tree that has been bearing for seventy years without intermission has attracted the attention of Culleoka readers, and it is said that Jeff Smith, who lives at that place has a tree in his orchard that was put out by his father and has never been known to produce a splendid yield of fruit for eighty years. This is a better term than the Kentucky tree and only shows that Maury county is equal to the best in apple growing.
