THE FARMERS.

General rejoicing over the rains that have at last broken the long drought in this section again illustrates the conditions under which the farmers, the most important class of all those engaged in gainful occupations, because they are the producers of the food and raiment of all the people, must labor and produce.

The farmer must not only be in constant combat with the forces of nature, for he must reckon with floods and draughts, but he must contend with insects and blights and rusts and a thousand other ills to which the plant life of the world is heir to.

For these reasons the farmer must not only be the most resourceful and the most self-reliant man in the world, but he is necessarily either an optimist or a pessimist. It requires not only good judgment but quick decision to solve the constantly changing problems that confront the farmer.

There are "ups and downs," there are disasters and disappointments, there is much of grinding toil and of the sacrifice of individual comfort and pleasure, in the lives of those who do achieve success on the farms, but it has its compensations that offset all these difficulties.

Without the heaven furnished by the steady yeomanry of this country, one trembles to contemplate the fate of our institutions in these critical days of unrest and discontent.

The Herald is authorized to announce HENDERSON AKIN a candidate for Trustee, subject to the action of the democratic primary November 12, 1921.

BUSINESS BETTER IN THE SOUTH

CLARENCE TATE SAYS MISSISSIPPI FARMERS ARE PRACTICING DIVERSIFICATION.

Clarence B. Tate, well known business man of Louisville, and who travels over the South, was here this morning between trains. Mr. Tate has just returned from a trip through Alabama and Mississippi very much pleased with the improvement of conditions in those states in recent weeks.
