

THE EXCHANGE

THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1878.

Jefferson Davis was complimented with a grand military review in the city of Mexico a few days since.

The European war prospect remains by status quo. There is some prospect that a Congress will assemble, but peace is by no means certain.

Major W. L. Salisbury, editor of the Enquirer-Sun, Columbus, Ga., was assailed by R. M. Palmer and Tom Holland at Seale, Ala., last Saturday night.

William Orton, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, died suddenly in New York last Monday morning, of apoplexy. He was in his fifty-sixth year.

McLin, Secretary of the State under Stevens, and L. G. Dennis, the "Little Giant of Alabama county," have made confessions in writing, as to the frauds in 1876, by which Florida was carried for Hayes. Dennis covers fully all the details of the Archer precinct frauds, which played so important a part before the Returning Board. He says that 214 names were put on the return of Archer precinct after the voting.

The Dyersburg Gazette of last week comes out favoring a primary election in this Congressional district, to nominate a candidate for Congress, and wants it held with the August election. We have long believed that to be the fairest way of making nominations, if the members of the party would turn out. Heretofore only a few have voted, and it amounted to about the same as an ordinary convention. If our people want it, we are heartily in favor of it.

A man named Hardwick, from Courtland, Ala., went to Memphis and got on a spree, took a blonde prostitute out to drive, got her drunk, and while both were intoxicated, married her. When she sobered up, she left him, carrying off his gold watch and some money. He wanted her arrested, but as she was his wife, nothing could be done for him. Next day he found her, got some more money, and went on a bridal tour to New Orleans. "Feed and his money."

The fourth national bank of Nashville announces its readiness to "re-organize."

Carpenters and masons are wanted in Clarksville, to help rebuild the burnt district.

The Madison county Democracy will hold a primary election on the 6th of May to nominate candidates for county offices.

Union City Chronicle: We understand there will be a grand picnic at Henderson Station on the 4th of May, at which Hon. E. M. Edrigh of Memphis will be present and deliver an address.

Part of the plastering of the Methodist church hall in Lebanon last Sunday during service, seriously wounding Mrs. White, mother of the editor of the Herald, and slightly wounding M. J. R. and wife.

Says the Nashville American: Judge Connelly F. Trigg is putting the screws of the law to illicit distillers. He fined them from one hundred to one thousand dollars yesterday, and sentenced them from one month to seven months in the county jail.

According to the Sunday school statistics for the United States and Canada compiled under the auspices of the International Sunday-school Convention, at Atlanta, Ga., Tennessee has 2,451 Sunday-schools, 22,655 teachers and officers, 100,736 scholars, total 182,761.

The Knoxville Chronicle says: We learn that the monument of Andrew Johnson will be unveiled on the 20th day of May and that the old life-time friend of Senator Johnston, Mr. Geo. W. Jones, of Fayetteville, Tenn., will deliver the oration. Of course there will be an immense crowd to witness the interesting ceremonies.

Charlesville Tobacco Leaf: New Providence, to be fatal, had to have a fire this week. Mr. Geo. Jones' storehouse at the far end of the town, was burned Monday night. Mr. Jones lost his entire stock of goods valued at $1,400. The building was owned by Mr. Whitefield. It is pronounced the work of incendiaries. No insurance.

Paris Intelligence: A colored girl baby in West Paris one month old has swollen breasts, the size of an ordinary hen's egg, from which milk, apparently well elaborated, flows in such quantities as to keep the dress wet. Such cases are very rare, but some cases of the sort are reported by many medical authors. It is an abnormal condition, and is really a diseased state.

Hartsville Sentinel: Mr. John Good, a very respectable citizen of Smith county, living on the head waters of Defeated creek, committed suicide by hanging himself to a pole in his tobacco barn on Tuesday, the 16th. He was quite dead when his body was discovered. He was a man about 60 years of age, and the cause for the commission of such a rash act is unknown. Fayetteville Observer: Mr. Willis D. Cole, a most worthy citizen of the vicinity of Camargo, was fearfully maimed by an enraged stallion last week. The horse which he was holding and which had not been considered vicious, suddenly seized him by the right wrist and ground the bones and flesh to fragments. The arm was amputated before the elbow on Sunday by Dr. C. B. McGuire.

Pulaski Citizen: We have the painful intelligence from Lawrenceburg, that on Saturday last Mr. Jno. Kennedy received a stab through the lung with a knife in the hands of Mr. Horner. Horner and Love were engaged in a fight, and Kennedy endeavored to separate them, when Horner thinking he was interfering in behalf of Love, stabbed him. At first the wound was supposed to be slight, but rumor says his situation is critical.

Lebanon Herald: Shortly after the hanging of the Brassells, at Cookeville, some little boys of this county, who had heard a great deal of talk about the execution, took it into their heads that it would be fun for them to have a hanging of their own. A scaffold was erected, the rope adjusted around the neck of one of their number and he was swung off in fine style. But for the interference of a lady who happened to be passing, the comedy would have become a tragedy, for the amateur Brassell was fast choking to death when she arrived.

Last week's Christian Advocate says: "The Vanderbilt University has been laid under fresh obligations to Mr. Wm. H. Vanderbilt for the donation of one thousand dollars for the enlargement of the library. It will be remembered that Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt had previously given one thousand dollars to be expended in books for the Biblical department of the University. The Faculty very gratefully recognized these acts of beneficence, in suitable resolutions, spread on their journal, and ordered an alms in the library to be set apart, with a suitable inscription, for the books purchased by these munificent donations. The choicest works in the several branches of science and literature will be procured by the Library Committee, after consulting with the members of the Faculty."

The Murfreesboro News says: Dol Bates, one of the murderers of Russell Allison, and who escaped the justice meted out to the Brassell brothers, was arrested Wednesday near Copper, in Cannon county, by Mr. Lewis Jettan and some other young men who were out in the woods hunting. They found Bates asleep with a double barrel gun under his arm. A horse was standing hitched near the spot. Suspecting him to be a horse thief they arrested him and took him to Readyville. Bates, soon after his arrest, confessed that he was the man implicated with the Brassells in the murder of Allison, and said that he had left the State, but was so nervous and uneasy in his mind he had concluded to come back. It is said he confessed the crime and remarked that he didn't care if he was hung within an hour.

Memphis Appeal: We are pleased to know that the Memphis medical hospital enterprise is rapidly assuming shape. Plans for the college building have been referred to a committee for selection. A beautiful lot, situated opposite the city hospital, on Union avenue, on which the college is to be erected, has been purchased. The faculty is complete. The first announcement is in the hands of the publishers, and will be issued by the first day of May. The contract for building the college will be let out by the tenth of May, to be completed for the reception of students on the first of October next, the beginning of the fall and winter session. For this enterprise, which will add materially to the importance of Memphis, we are indebted to a few public spirited, energetic members of the medical profession, who have toiled diligently for months past, and have overcome every obstacle.

AUNT HANNAH JACKSON. A Touching Description of Gen. Jackson's Death, by One of his Faithful Attendants. A reporter of the American yesterday visited Hannah Jackson, colored, relict of Rev. Aaron Jackson, who recently died at the age of 92 years. He found her at No. 161 South Summer street, where she resides with a daughter. The reporter told Aunt Hannah that he desired to obtain from her reminiscences of her earlier life in connection with the Herdington. She said she was growing old, and could not tell it all as straight as Aaron (her late husband) could. Aaron knew it all, and it was often that they sat by the fire and talked over old times, when they were with Aaron Jackson. They were always treated like white folks. Said she, "As the tears trickled down her cheeks, 'Marse Jackson was a father to us servants, he was so good and kind to us. The morning he died the house was crowded, and the whole yard. Two hundred and fourteen drunks were living on his place. It was very distressing. They tried to carry me out when old Marse was dying, and he told them to let me alone. You see I had always waited on him, and he wasn't going to drive me out. 'No,' he said, 'let Hannah remain, if she wants to, and I did. I wasn't going to surrender my place to any one, though I was so full of grief all the time that I could hardly stay in the room. Every morning Dr. Estleman told me to eat a fresh egg and to mix it with milk and brown sugar and let old Marse eat it. I did it regularly. When I came in, Friday morning, with coffee and brown sugar and milk, I says to George Harris, 'Is old Marse asleep?' He says 'no'. George looked me in the face and said, 'Hannah, you will soon be done totin' this into old Marse. And then, Saturday morning, I carried it in again. Old Marse didn't take it for some time, and when he did it was a long while, like it went down so heavy. I can't tell you what I felt then,' and here the aged woman wept like a child. 'I know death was mighty nigh when he couldn't take that little bit of morsel. Sunday morning I didn't see any change in him. Marse Andrew asked if he knew them all. 'Yes,' he said. 'I know you all, though I can't see you. And they brought him his specs, and he said he recognized them all. The first thing I knew George Harris cried 'Oh!' and it was repeated back to the kitchen. Old Marse was not dead but his breath had stopped. All crowded in to the room, when Dr. Eschman said they must get out. The doctor gave him something and it revived him up, and he lived until 8 o'clock in the evening. White and black were all standing in the room together, just before he died. No distinction was shown in the eyes of old Marse. Turning his eyes to where me and George were standing, he said, 'And here's poor faithful servants to me. I have left it as you will be taken care of as long as there is a bit of property left. He then called Mrs. Adams up and told her he had fully provided for her and she would not suffer for anything. Just before he died he preached his own sermon. He said: 'My friends, Christ is no respecter of persons, and what I say to one I say to all, and I have a right to the Tree of Life; prepare to meet me in Heaven, where I am going.' And now all cried out, 'Look! look!' and old Marse was dead. His soul went right straight up to Heaven; I know it did; and my husband has gone up to meet him, and I want to be long here. My husband always said old Marse preached his own funeral. And he did, too. Geo. Harris and me were head waiters and we could not help crying bitterly when the last spark went out and old Marse's spirit was taken up into Heaven by the angels of God.' -Nashville American, 21st.
