HON. JOE BAILEY

Will Go As Delegate To Denver Convention.

Dallas, Tex., May 2.—After probably the most spectacular campaign ever known in the political history of the Southwest, dating from March 28 and ending last night, returns from the Democratic primaries of this State to-day to name delegates at large to the national convention show that the ticket headed by United States Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey has received a majority.

Two years ago in the primary elections held by the Democrats, less than a score of the estimated 292,000 votes cast were against the Senator. Some time afterwards the fight began, and, rising gradually until it permeated the outer limits of the State, increased month by month until the session of the last legislature.

At this session Senator Bailey was re-elected to his seat in the Senate, and within a few days more faced an investigating committee which probed charges of connection with the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, the Standard and other combinations. The lower house committee exonerated the Senator. The upper house committee was discharged from its duties before a decision was reached, and Senator Bailey's enemies claimed openly that the vote was forced in the Senate of the Texas legislature because a majority has expressed themselves against him.

BAILEY'S FAMOUS THREAT.

Then Senator Bailey made his famous speech in which he promised unrelenting warfare against his opponents, in which he also declared that none of his opponents should attend the next national Democratic convention, that caused the fight this spring.

ANCIENT HIGHWAY.

England's Great North Road Is Two Thousands Years Old.

Before we reached Hatfield, a few miles out of London, we had already been impressed with the magnificence of this Great North Road, which is said to have been built by Mr. Caesar, whose headquarters were in Rome at the time. It is the direct route from London to Edinburgh, and has been traveled for so many centuries that the earliest histories of England contain accounts of the movements of troops upon it. It is a great thoroughfare for vehicles of all sorts, motorists and cyclists, and in these modern days there are well-known footpaths along either side for pedestrians. We passed scores of motors, and I was told while in England that the popularity of motoring had noticeably diminished the number of first-class travelers by rail. We found the road for its entire length of 400 miles in perfect condition. In many portions the macadam is said to be nine feet thick. Long sections of the road are oiled, and no part of it was there any appreciable dust. There are few sharp curves, and the grades are so slight that it had become a great thoroughfare for speeders with the result that there are many police traps for which one has to watch. We found that we could stop in almost any little village, and get information as to just where the traps were located—as, for instance, they told us at Binglewade, which is a better looking place than its name, to look out for traps just the other side of Buckden and again in approaching Weston.—Frank Presbrey, in Outing Magazine.

COL. WATTERSON

Picks Platform Which He Thinks Should Be Drafted.

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—Declaring that Secretary of War William H. Taft is to be the Republican can nominee for President, and W. J. Bryan the Democratic standard bearer, Henry Watterson in his paper to-day outlines what he believes should be some of the planks in the Democratic platform.

"State rights under the constitution, equality of law for the organized few no less than the organized many, the lid off the franchise corporation and all combines, whether political or capitalistic; publicity, the sure safeguard against conspiracy; no sumptuary laws; the complete separation of church and State; and a tariff for revenue only," are the chief issues which the editor says Democrats should urge.

ABOUT THE NEWSPAPERS.

He says, in effect, if he can support Bryan no Democrat should be able to find an excuse for failing to do so, and tells of his former opposition to the Nebraskan. He says the newspaper forces which are trying to defeat Bryan are committed to Taft anyway.

Watterson's message in full to the National Democracy is as follows:

"Well-advised observers know already that the lines of the approaching campaign are laid and the leaders as good as named. The nominating conventions will meet only to record the ascertained will of the constituencies. Mr. Taft is as sure of the Republican nomination as Mr. Bryan of the Democratic nomination. Those who quibble in either camp are either politicians playing for their own advantage, or else enemies in disguise.

"If we cannot elect Bryan, we can elect nobody. The time for alternatives went long ago. There is but one course open for sensible men and good Democrats to pursue, and that is to quit hair-splitting, to close ranks and rally round the donkey and the flag, on which still appears the Democratic legend, 'Equality for all men; exclusive privileges for none.'

"If we can get to Bryan, surely the most disaffected ought to be able to reach him without much trouble in case they be Democrats and not Republicans. We fought a good fight against him, and we fought it to a finish. We fought it sincerely, openly, frankly, unsparingly. Not until money, mysterious and unexpected, took the field—after we had plead in vain for some intelligent, disinterested, popular response—did the newspapers of New York City begin to open their eyes—to sit up and take notice. It is too late.

NOT ONE A DEMOCRAT.
"But what matters it? Most of these newspapers were long ago committed to Taft. Not one of them is a Democrat by principle, by predilection, or by habit.

"We hope that our words do not lack either for plainness or specification. We mean them. On the eve of a national battle which is to determine for an era the destination of our party politics—which is to decide, it may be, for all time, between federalism and statehood, between home rule and centralization—it behooves the Democrats of the United States—in case there are any, and we believe there are yet a plenty—to gird their loins, to study the horn-books of their history and their faith; if they can, to read the very stars.

"These are axiomatic tenets of Democratic gospel, sufficient, if put into practical effect, to scotch, if not to kill, the plutocracy; enough, if boldly proclaimed by a Democracy stripped to the girth for the death struggle, to sweep opportunism of the Taft-Roosevelt variety—ringed, streaked, and striped—from the face of the earth, and once again to establish the saints in glory!

"In short, and in fine, Democrats must get down to business and out of the anti-Bryan habit. It is Bryan or nothing. Except that too many fools got to the front, the party might have been saved in 1896. It can be saved now if too nals and neds not go to the rear.

34 BUCKET SHOPS.

Cincinnati Grand Jury Reports on Lengthy Investigation.

Cincinnati, May 2.—Nineteen separate indictments, charging thirty-four well known business men with operating "bucket shops" in this city, were returned by the grand jury this morning and warrants were immediately issued for the arrest of the men. However, a truce was declared until Monday, when all will appear in court.

The indictments are the result of months of tireless work on the part of County Prosecutor Rulison. In addition it was intimated that there are some more indictments to come, as the prosecutor has information against others which will have to be presented to the grand jury later. Among these indicted are:

Lewis W. Foster, E. Bultman, John W. Ballman, Joseph V. Mackey, Charles Frank, William Brown and Alexander McDonald Brown, Samuel Hill, John Brennan, John J. Ryan, Joseph Brill, Hiran de Camp, George H. Stapley, John A. Payne, George W. Bennett, Edward H. Bryson, Harry Furst, W. C. Dudley, John Gorman, Henry Warren, Joseph E. Chuck, Robert C. Losey, William R. Todd, Ramey Field, Bingham H. Morehead, William D. Klausman, Thomas N. Rutter, Morehead and Company, Harry M. Foster and Louis L. Applegate, the Phoenix Grain and Stock Exchange.

The indictments charge that the brokers "did unlawfully keep a bucket shop and place wherein was conducted and permitted the pretended buying and selling of shares of stocks and bonds of corporations, petroleum, cotton, grain and produce on margins, without any intention of receiving and paying for the property so pretended to be bought or of delivering the same so pretended to be sold."

Report of Express Robbery Near Pittsburg Not Made Public.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 3.—More gold coin and more gold leaf, part of the plunder stolen from the Adams Express car on Thursday night, was picked up to-day by boys in the vicinity of Walker's Mills, where the Panhandle railroad, where the robbery occurred. This afternoon hundreds of boys, and some men as well, searched all over the neighborhood looking for gold and money which might have been "cached" by the robbers.

Scores of Pinkertons are scattered all over the neighborhood. That they are completely at sea was admitted this afternoon at the office of the Pinkerton agency. They have a number of clues which they are working on, they say. The officials of the Adams Express Company to-day practically admitted that the sum of money stolen was large, but they refuse to give the amount. It is reported, however, that instead of being $80,000, as has been rumored, the sum may reach $500,000. Noah Roshon, the express messenger, in whose car the robbery happened, left to-day for Columbus. He will resume his duties with the company.
