Everything dates from Dahnke's.

W. H. Harris & Co. is the latest style of the firm with offices north of Alexander & Tisdale's in the National Harvester Building. The members are W. H. Harris and J. L. Ranson, who will be in the market this season for wheat and corn. A great deal of wheat, we are told, has already been sold. The acreage is not large in this county, but the yield is extra good. So probably there will be an opportunity for handling a very liberal amount for shipment.

Dolphus Holder Released.
Dolphus Holder, of this county, who was sentenced and has been serving a term in the penitentiary, was set free last week, getting a reduction of his sentence of several months for good behavior. He was sentenced for three years.

Heavy Rains.
Unusually heavy rains fell in Obion County this week, doing much damage to growing crops in the lower sections. Dahnke brothers' fine farm at Crockett was overflowed and the crop of corn, which will almost hide a horse, was badly injured—in fact almost ruined. Water was higher than has been seen at this season of the year-for years.

For Sale Cheap.
Gentle, reliable family horse, second-hand buggy and harness, second-hand one-horse wagon and harness. Any or all for sale cheap. See 17-4t DR. E. B. LITTLE.

The Parade on The Fourth.
The Commercial reported the parade last week just as we saw it pass. All the occupants of the vehicles were not mentioned, and hence we overlooked the fact that the decorated vehicle, whose occupants were Misses Irene Davis and Floy Coble, also contained two other ladies, Miss Ruby Mays and Miss Claire Littleton. This vehicle was decorated under the direction of Miss Mays, and was furnished by her for the parade. The oversight was unintentional. The vehicle occupied by Misses Sallie George Chambers and Katherine Flack was the Red Cross contribution to the parade, and it was also one of the leading features.

That cool place—Dahnke's.

King, of Hays avenue, and has just returned from a visit here.—Jackson Sun.
