

On the first page of the paper will be found an address on Philippine independence delivered by Congressman Garrett in the House of Representatives. It will be seen from this that Mr. Garrett, a man of very sound opinion and conviction, is in line with the policy of the National Administration on this question. He seems to be following the footsteps of the late lamented Senator Carmack, who led the fight in the Senate some years ago for the independence of the Philippines in one of the most aggressive and brilliant records ever made in the Senate. Mr. Garrett disposes of the Republican theory that the United States cannot honorably retire from the islands in a very clear and convincing way, and his remarks seem to have caught the ear of the House with some deep-rooted thought. He studies his subjects and is generally on firm ground when he gets up to speak. The Ninth District takes considerable pride in Mr. Garrett's work.

For the Christmas Bazaar.

One of the most enjoyable afternoon entertainments was that given by Mrs. Ed Kirkland and Mrs. Clifford Joyner at the pretty town home of the former last Saturday afternoon. The affair was given for the Christmas bazaar to be held by the First Christian Church some time before that date. It was a baby linen shower, each guest bringing a donation in linen, lace or silk for baby wear.

Mrs. Kirkland's talent as a designer of original social affairs is well known here. Her possession of ideas that many hostesses here may well envy was artistically carried out in the arrangement of her reception rooms and in the various contests enjoyed, the many guests entering into the contests with the spirit born of interest and not of mere politeness.

dolls were suspended from the light dome by blue ribbons. On the backs of these dollies was written "Our Baby." Pencils were attached and each guest drawing a doll had to make as many words as possible from the two words, writing the list on the doll's backs. Mrs. Dan Glenn received the prize for the most words. It was a big blue celluloid rattle. For the second contest the guests were given little rolls of white wax wrapped in with rolls of white paper and tied with blue ribbon like baby dummies. This wax had to be chewed and made into little dolls. Mrs. Thad Lee received the prize for the best modeled doll baby. It was so natural that it had dimples. The prize for this fete was a hand-painted and attractively mounted picture of a stork and babies. The last contest was the putting together of a cut advertisement for Menen's Talcum Powder, Fairy Soap, Holeproof Hosiery and other advertisements relative to babyhood. As the ladies finished their puzzles they were presented with dolls to whose backs the following cards were fastened with blue ribbon, "Please dress me and send me to the Christmas bazaar."

Chocolate and animal crackers were served the guests on arriving. The refreshments at the close of the contests were blocked chicken sandwiches cut in the shape of baby moccasins and tied with blue ribbon, and strawberry ices.

Virginia Goes Dry.

What is this startling news they print?

Virginia's dry, they say.

Of this we never had a hint

Before election day.

The Colonels and their juleps rare

Were celebrated long,

And people knew them everywhere

In story and in song.

But now no fragrant greens may tint

The sugar and the rye.

Exterminate the beds of mint,

Virginia has gone dry!

You've Got It.

When you're all choked up and your muscles ache

And a thousand cures you're told to take.

When your head feels like it's all stove in

And you only cry when you try to grin.

When you long to take a gun and blow

Your brains out—don't care where you go—

When your throat is sore and your eyes are dim

And your head doth roar and you've got no vim.

When you feel the daises soon must wave

So sadly o'er your new made grave.

When ev'ry time you heave a cough

It nearly takes your blamed head off.

When life looks black and those you meet

Eye you with pity on the street.

When the war in Europe can go hang

And the world series has no more tang.

When you cling to a jug of whiskey like

A beginner clings to his wabbling bike.

When you hate to die, yet fear to live,

And drug stores you your money give.

When you feel like Fate has mashed you flat,

Till you don't know where on earth you're at—

You've got the grip!
