Don't forget the big 25c window at Wehman's. It is open soon.

Home Burned.

W. M. McClanahan, of the country north of town, was here Saturday and reports the loss by fire of the home of his son, Will, and family near Martin last Friday morning, and that the family had moved back to Number One. The fire originated while Mr. McClanahan was out on his farm, and was not discovered until the flames were beyond control. The building was estimated at about $1,600, with only $700 insurance. The furniture was very well covered, but most of it was saved. The many friends regret this misfortune and hope the family will soon be housed in another comfortable home.

A Brass Fire Set is a mighty good gift suggestion. You will find them at Wehman's.

In Memoriam.

On the evening of Dec. 11, 1914, at 6 o'clock p. m., when nature's curtain was thrown carefully over all the busy whirl and confusion of the day, the worthy subject of this sketch was quietly and calmly released from her suffering and pain and the gentle spirit winged its way to the God who gave it.

A number of good and edifying verses presented themselves to the writer on receiving the sad intelligence of the death and burial of this cousin and friend, one of which was very forcibly impressed on my mind. "I have been with you in the sixth trouble and the seventh I will not forsake." Also the 23d Psalm was very beautifully illustrated in the life and death of this noted character who lived a very consecrated and devoted life to her family and friends, her church and her God. She, before her failing health, was a consistent member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. She was a great worker for and in the church, and at church benefits never allowed tired, had feelings to absent her from her post of duty. I remember one incident. Addie was the teacher of the bible class in the Sabbath school for a number of years. Several of the dormitory boys joined her class. One day there was something she wanted the class to memorize, I believe it was the Ten Commandments. Being asked the question, if all had bibles, one bright, promising young man responded that he had none. The next day's mail brought to him the coveted treasure. After receiving it he hurried to my room to show Aunt Ann the contents of the nice little package containing a beautiful pocket bible with a dainty perfumed note bearing best wishes for his future welfare. I thought again of the precious promises that await the final faithful, "Cast thy bread upon the waters and it shall be gathered many days hence." And so forth and on, this life was full of just such deeds too numerous to mention.

As the writer wended her way through the assemblage of friends and relatives, all the rooms and hall and back gallery crowded with friends of the departed, I was almost tempted to stop and risk hearing the tender and pathetic song they were singing preparatory to further service, when the thought came to me of an expression of my dear old father, which was that there was always room for one more at the top round of the ladder. Also a kind friend of mine gently lent me a helping hand to ascend the steps. When seated I thought what a blessing for one to live a life of usefulness and try to let your light shine that it could and did have an influence for good and not evil all the way down the journey of life.

This dear girl had many friends and kinsmen who did all they could to alleviate her suffering, which she bore so bravely and with such fortitude, all the while planning and arranging her plans for the end—that she was fully aware of the fact that the time was stealthily approaching when the messenger would come for her to go to her eternal home. Taking her time to quietly and with the most resigned manner she made final disposal of all her little treasures of an earthly nature—to those she felt she wished to have them, then carefully made all arrangements preparatory to her eternal home.

So that is the final career of this noble girl who looked so long to the home interest and care of her dear, patient mother, that never did tire of doing, doing, trying, trying, watching, watching, hoping against hope, yet never tiring, always ready to try any suggestion that could be rendered for the better. I thought of the dear old grandmother, Aunt Margaret Harper, who loved Addie so dearly and with whom she lived until large enough to go to school; how proud she would be of her girl's biography. Her grandma, who could see a long ways and all the good points, was a woman of uncommon mind.

Addie Gardner was born in Brownsville, Tenn., Dec. 3, 1868, departed this life Dec. 5, 1914, 6 o'clock p. m. She leaves a devoted mother, one sister, Mrs. Annette Boaz, and two brothers to sincerely mourn her going onward and upward to her eternal home.

Christmas Market.

The ladies of Pleasant Valley announce a Christmas market Wednesday, Dec. 23, at White's furniture store near the old post office, where will be offered for sale for the benefit of the new church dressed hens, chicken, eggs, milk, butter, and cake and other articles. The friends are invited to come and help in the work.

Call 150, Union City Ice & Coal Co., when you want coal right now.

Poor Blood An Effect

"N. R. A. writes: I am 45 and do not have enough blood. Will elixir of iron, quinine and strychnine be of any use? What dose should be taken and how often? What would you recommend as a blood builder and tonic?"

REPLY

"Elixir of iron, quinine and strychnine constitutes a good general blood tonic. But poor blood is an effect. Generally it is possible to find the cause. It is good judgment to treat causes, not effects. Too many people dope with iron tonic year in and year out, when what they need to do to remove the cause would not be difficult to discover or remedy.

Sometimes it is hookworm, sometimes constipation, sometimes indoor life, sometimes stomach ulcer, sometimes cancer, sometimes bad eating habits."

The above article originated with Dr. W. A. Evans, health specialist on the staff of the Chicago Tribune. Dr. Evans, in the reply he makes N. R. A., is a CHIROPRACTOR all the way through the first paragraph of his answer. He turns "doctor" again, however, in the last paragraph, where he looks to hookworms instead of SUBLUXATIONS as the "cause."

The Telephone and Good Roads

The telephone goes hand in hand with good roads.

The telephone overcomes many of the obstacles of bad roads and makes it possible for the farmer and other rural residents to transact business in the city and with neighbors when the roads are impassable.

Progressive farmers are insisting upon good roads and telephones. These two agencies of modern civilization are doing more than all others toward eliminating the isolation of country life. You can have a telephone in your home at very small cost. Send a postal for our free booklet giving complete information.
