1918 REDPATH CHAUTAUQUA 1918 PROGRAM

Seven Cheer-Up Days

QUICK to sense the public needs in a year when so many people are planning to take their vacations at home, the Redpath has arranged Seven Cheer-Up Vacation Days for each city on its circuit this season, and offers this Seven Day program for the same price as heretofore, $2.50, except for 10% War Tax.

You thought when the war broke out that the time to be entertained and inspired had passed; that seriousness and anxious thought must inevitably hold sway.

Keep Up Home Morale

BECAUSE of this, more emphasis has been given to bright, cheery music, gorgeous costumes and scenery, fun and inspiration than ever before.

The Redpath Chautauqua offers you Seven Days of wholesome fun, genuine inspiration, courage, reassurance, just the thing to keep up the Home Morale.

Miles of Smiles

WHEN the boys began to go to the front this attitude changed. You did not want them to go away in gloom nor to remember your face as one of sadness. In fact, you sent them Smileage Books and invited them to enjoy "Miles of Smiles."

Then you discovered that you could not do your best work in an atmosphere of gloom and suspense and finally concluded that you too need relaxation, entertainment and inspiration if you are to perform your greatest patriotic duties and "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

A Patriotic Institution

NOT only this, but the Redpath Chautauqua comes to you as a highly patriotic institution which has helped raise the Liberty Loan, entertained the boys in the cantonments and educated the American people in the principles of Democracy in such a measure that President Wilson has declared the Chautauqua "An integral part of our National Defense."

A War-Time Economy

THE lectures this year will be greater, more timely, more enlightening than ever before, the kind that inspire men to heroism and great deeds.

Therefore, all in all, the Redpath Chautauqua comes to your city to help brighten your life, and serve your community and your country and as a real war-time economy. You cannot afford to miss these Seven Big Cheer-Up Days. Tickets now on sale.

Other Calls for Troops.

Mr. Chas. W. Miles, Jr., Secretary Local Board, announces two calls for troops to leave during the present month. He says on account of the heavy calls and the number required to fill, a great many men now engaged in agricultural pursuits will of necessity be taken.

During the week beginning June 19 there will be entrained at this point sixty-six negroes for Camp

Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa. During the week beginning June 24 there will be entrained seventy white men for Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga.

Genius of Forrest and Foch.

The name of Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest has been introduced into discussion of the war by Gen. Maurice, who quotes, apropos of the present task of the Allies, Gen. Forrest's oft quoted reply to a woman who asked him what was the secret of his success. Gen. Maurice reproduces the epigram as he has heard it and observes that although Napoleon did not utter it he acted upon it.

Napoleon did say, unless the words have been put in his mouth across his grave, that great generalship consisted in recognizing the value of five minutes. That, if there is a secret of generalship which can be expressed in words—a secret in the form of a plan of action and aside from the magic of the genius of leadership of men, and personal inspiration—expressed the policy of Forrest better than the ungrammatical epigram which tradition has attributed to him.

Gen. Maurice's version of Gen. Forrest's utterance is "I got there first with the mostest men." The New York Times sensibly interposes the objection that this is baby talk rather than the speech of an ill educated Tennessean and ventures the assertion that what Forrest said was: "I got thar fust with the most men."

A fact of history which both Gen. Maurice and the New York Times overlook; a fact which should not be overlooked because, as it applies to Gen. Forrest—at McMinnville and at Murfreesboro and Tishamingo Creek for example—and to Gen. Foch in the glorious Battle of the Marne in 1914, is that getting there first with the most men is not the secret of generalship. If it were, war would be robbed of its only really romantic aspect and reduced to utter sordidness. The Germans would have reached Paris in 1914 if superiority of numbers, plus superiority of equipment, plus being first in the field always insured victory. The German Crown Prince, and not Gen. Nivelle, would have been the hero of Verdun if so simple a formula as that attributed to Forrest were the first and last rule of success.

If Gen. Forrest ever said anything like what has been attributed to him popularly he must have said it to a woman and said it jestingly or in modest deprecation of his leadership, in the spirit in which Gen. Nivelle told the correspondents at Verdun, when they asked about his strategy, that the only military science he knew was "fight."

Gen. Forrest proved his ability first by supporting a widowed mother and her brood upon a small and poor hill farm in Mississippi and expanding his operations until he became one of the wealthiest planters in Tennessee, and next by entering the Confederate army as a private and rising to the rank of Lieutenant General and proving himself, as Sherman said, and as the New York Times quotes him as having said, "one of the most remarkable men our Civil War produced on either side." Had he depended upon numbers he never would have won fame and the respect of the foe. His triumph over difficulties, mainly the difficulty of inferior numbers, which made his war record consistent with his peace record, a triumph over the obstacles of poverty and the handicap of the necessity for supporting his father's family, made him a brilliantly successful leader despite the failure of the cause in which his services were enlisted.

The plan of German preparedness contemplated smashing thru by sheer weight of numbers and superiority of equipment before the ill-prepared French and the British with their "contemptible little army" could stop the Kaiser's millions. For four years the Germans have maintained superiority of numbers on their western front, but they have not yet reached the objective which they believed they could reach in September or October, 1914. The Allies have had to depend upon a military plan exactly opposite from that popularly attributed to Gen. Forrest. The final defeat of the Germans may result from the assembling of superior forces by the Allies, but even if that is true the glory of the victory will belong largely to the "thin line of heroes" and the leaders who defeated the German horde during four years of fighting and demonstrated that superior numbers can be met by superior fighting qualities, as was the case commonly in Gen. Forrest's experience. Gen. Foch is a leader whose brilliancy in combat with superior numbers has given him fame which a triumph over the Germans as a result of putting 2,000,000 Americans in France would not obscure.—Louisville Courier-Journal.
