HARRY HARRYON HOGG

Some Very Good Reasons Why the Drummers Will Vote for Clark.

Yoakum, Tex., Oct. 28.—To The News: In your issue of today you give a synopsis of Governor Hogg's speech at La Grange, in which he says "the drummers are not all against me; some of them are," and referring to the commercial men's address, which, by the way, acts upon him as does a red flag upon a wild bull, further says we "have attempted to make the people believe that the great body of drummers belonging to the Travelers' protective association are opposing him."

He further says he has the honor of belonging to our association.
Now, Mr. Editor, as a member of the T. P. A., and as one who has been somewhat prominently connected with it from its inception, I desire to state to the public that Hogg does not, never was and most assuredly never will be a member, either honorary or otherwise, of the Travelers' protective association, Texas division.

So much for this assertion, and Governor Hogg knows he did not state the truth when he made it.
While the T. P. A. is not a political organization, the commercial men's association is composed to a great extent of men who are now and have always been prominently connected with our order.

Hogg says there are two kinds of lawyers, the honorable and the jackleg, and that there are two kinds of drummers, the respectable and the "heel fly."

Judging from the way he was handled before the United States court at Galveston in the Stockton case, and the Asher case in the supreme court of the United States at Washington, he must assuredly belong to the latter class, to whom he so aptly refers. He says he "lambasted" us at Galveston. Does the record show it? He was beaten by his friend Duncan to whom we paid a very liberal fee to defend our case, and who routed Hogg, "horse, foot and dragoons." If the speech he made before Judge Sab-bin's court is what he calls lambasting it's a new name to give to words so low and indecent that the News in publishing it was compelled to eliminate a very large portion that was unfit for print.
Now, Mr. Editor, I wish to say that we are not politicians, we, all of us, aware as our order books show it that business has suffered most materially during the two years of Hogg's regime, and we desire by our votes and efforts to effect a change of administration, whose policy is not to run capital out of the state, through whose liberal ideas and broad views prosperity may once more be brought back to us, and to this end we will work for and cast our vote on November 8 for George Clark, the next governor of Texas.

A Bird-Eating Tree.

From the Million.
A late traveler was in Mexico on a botanical expedition. One day he saw a dark object on one of the outlying spurs of the Sierra Madre Mountains. He saw it had long, slender limbs drooping like a weeping willow. They had a slimy, snaky appearance, and at times the whole tree seemed to writhe. One day he saw a bird circle about it for some time, and then a light on the top. Then the branches began to cry, and drew it down until he lost sight of it. The botanist tried, as he had several times before, to climb the steep.
The rock on which he stepped loosened and fell, himself with it.
He was not injured, and he found that the rock had left quite a cavity. He looked in and saw quite a cavern, and felt a current of fresh air blowing on his face. With his towel he enlarged the hole so as to admit of his ascent. He saw the flattened body of the bird fall to the ground, which was covered with bones and feathers. The tree was not above 20 feet in height, but covered a great area. Its trunk was of prodigious thickness, knotted and scaly. From the top of this trunk, a few feet from the ground, its slimy branches curved upward and downward, nearly touching the ground with their tips. On his venturing touch lightly one of the limbs it closed on his hand with such force that it tore the skin when he wrenched it away.
There was no foliage on the tree.

A Opera-House Burned.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 31.—At 2:30 this morning this city was visited by another large conflagration, which resulted in the total destruction of the Grunwald opera hall, a large five story structure on Baronne near Canal street. When the firemen reached the scene the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to save the building. About this time the spectators were horrified to discover on the edge of the coping of the fifth floor a group of half naked, terrified beings, consisting of two men, a woman and four little children crying for help. The first ladders erected were too short and it was feared that all these doomed to destruction, but other ladders were quickly thrown across the alleyway which divided the opera house from the chess club, and over this frail bridge the imperiled beings were hastily carried to safety by several gallant fireman, but not before the woman and her baby were severely burned about the legs.
By hard work the fire was confined to the Grunwald building, though Tuland university, the adjoining building on the south side, was several times in flames. The lower floor of the opera hall was occupied by Louis Grunwald's music emporium and the upper floors by several social societies. Mr. Grunwald's stock was totally destroyed, but no interruption to the firm's business will ensue, as they also occupy a large store several blocks distant on Canal street. A large consignment of pianos arrived on Friday's steamer, but fortunately, owing to the existing strike, they had not yet been removed to the store.

The loss on the building and stock is $120,000, with insurance of $88, 000, mostly in local companies.

Mr. What's-his-name.

From the San Antonio Express.
There is a man in San Antonio with a name without an equal in the state, so authorities on the subject contend. The gentleman is Mr. W. A. Schudzikvanderjutschenka, who lives at 104 Monterey street. Mr. Schudzikvanderjutschenka is a foreigner it is said and looks like a Russian. Mr. Schudzikvanderjutschenka went to the office of the registrar on the second day before it closed and registered.
August Hornung was one of the registration clerks, but he could not write the name. He says that the ink did not hold out.

Finally, with a good deal of persuasion and much more assistance Hornung tried again and wrote the name. Mr. Schudzikvanderjutschenka was given certificate No 7, 025 and walked off contentedly.
When he got home he noticed what perhaps all other people in the world would never have discovered that his name had been spelled wrong the certificate. The letter "r," the the fourteenth letter from the beginning and the eleventh letter omitted. So Mr. Schudzikvanderjutschenka hunted up Registrar Sautleben, locating him in front of the county court house Sunday afternoon.

"I insist on having my name spelled correctly," said Mr. Schudzikvanderjutschenka to Mr. Sautle-ben.

Mr. Schudzikvanderjutschenka's name will be spelled correctly after date.

WIT AND HUMOR.

Old and New.

From Good News.
Little Boy: What's the difference between high church and low church?

Little Girl: Why, don't you know? One says "Aw-men," an' the other says "A-men."
