THE WACO EXAMINER

WACO, TEXAS, MARCH 14, 1885.

WACO is booming.

THE wheat prospect is superb.

WE would see the legislature adjourn now without a tear.

THE Waco brick yards are going ahead again. That means business.

WACO will not come out second best in her business this spring and the coming summer.

THE son of the proprietor of the London Times died recently at Santa Barbara, California.

THE mails are only a little irregular these days. That'll hurt the tenure men if it aint speedily rectified.

THE summer's operations will be very satisfactory if the war between Russia and England comes to a head. Texas will reap a harvest sure enough.

THE Fort Worth Gazette has cut down awfully force of late, and the forced reduction in consequence o short paper supply, makes it look scaley indeed.

LANG would make an excellent commissioner of agriculture, and we sincerely hope he will get the place. The entire Texas delegation should support him warmly.

SAN ANTONIO has touched the awful depth in business depression indicated by the fact that one is now "monkeying" with a Houston man to help out her railroad schemes. It's awful, but true.

THE president's silver policy is the weakest thing we have yet seen from him. Silver coinage is a great necessity now, not only as a monetary move, but to encourage the slowly reviving industries of the west.

JOHN IRELAND can afford to smile at the appointment of Jackman, because it is an excellent one, and he does not care particularly for the locality of the new marshal, because he doesn't have to.

IF you want to stir the bile very profoundly in the stomach of the editor of the Houston Journal, just tell him that Waco is making 25 per cent. on her working capital. Houston and Galveston both despise to see an inferior town go front.

THE Fort Worth Gazette's commission that the Missouri Pacific is trying to force the state to support them for the road at its own figures is a strained and exceedingly unjust one. Because a man undertakes to operate a railroad it does not necessarily follow that he is both fool and knave.

The Railroad Question.

The existing complications on the Gould roads west and south, again directs the public mind to the general railroad question, and men are impartially and patriotically attempting to peer into the maze to find, if possible, some means to guard effectually against these murderous interferences with the business of the country so often and so hugely occurring either from the stupidity of the management or the willfulness of the employes. There is no end to the legislation already had in the several states on this head, and yet there has been nothing offered which promises the least semblance of relief or security for the future. The bill which passed the Texas senate the other day requiring the companies to give thirty days notice before making a cut, and which further places heavy penalties for interfering to prevent men from seeking employment with the roads is another of those dead-letter affairs which we print only to see them help to swell great volumes of statutes as impracticable and as useless as the shadows on the moon are to the dwellers on the earth. Even with Reagan's interstate commerce bill we would have no remedy against such a state of affairs as now exist on the Gould lines in the west. The roads themselves can do nothing to guard against these occurrences. In these great combinations there are always one or more roads which pay well sometimes enormously, and these must carry roads which are run at a dead loss. Whenever the lossages exceed the profits then these measures of reduction follow, and combined as they are, the roads which pay are placed in the same awkward position occupied by the non-paying roads, and the people who support and pour their business into the line which pays are put at the same disadvantage experienced by the people along the line of a non-paying road, like the M. K. & T. The duties of public carriers are clearly defined and well understood. Numberless enactments, both by state legislatures and by congress, set these out very fully and very clearly. But they all fail to the ground promptly whenever the road fails to pay, and a reduction, with its resultant strike, and consequent interruption and entire stoppage occurs. We look in vain for relief to many sources. We appeal in vain to the patriotism of employes and the sense of justice of the managements of the roads. These are beautiful theories, but when we attempt to reduce them to practice we are met effectually by such declarations as these: That is all very nice, but we can't pay it with the existing state of trade, the men ought to be worth more, ought to be paid more, but how can we do it? Or on the other hand by the men with, yes, we admit the road is not paying, but how can a man live and maintain a family on less than a dollar a day? Before these two answers the loftiest statesmanship of any age will stand dumb and voiceless.

Clearly, then, something else must be done. A remedy should be sought for in some other direction. Our government will be compelled to assume the charge of operating the roads as do those of Europe generally, and as ours does the postal service. It will be many years ere this idea will be relished by the people or its general discussion be tolerated; but still we will be forced to it inevitably in the end, no matter if it is concentration, pure and simple. One general per mile rate for both passage and freight, one general wage for all sorts of labor or service on the roads, and these to be paid on a certain day surely and certainly, no matter if the line realizes money or not for the government. Now bear this matter in mind and see if from this out the discussion of the ways and means by which this mighty change may be wrought are not more frequently and fully talked than they have ever been in the past.

Federal Patronage.

The disposition of the federal patronage of Texas is a very delicate affair, and it requires more deftness and discretion than many a man, otherwise intelligent, would believe until he has examined the matter and recalled a good deal of the history of the past. It was on this rock that the once dominant republican party of Texas split. It got on all right so far as the state government and its patronage went, but when it came to the parcelling out the lovely little bits of richness furnished by the federal crib, they promptly went together by the ears and a Kilkenny cat struggle with its inevitable result followed.

[illegible]
And the political leaders
Of north carolina know what I am saying.

Now then, if that is true history, and it is, if poor Davis and Norton could be resurrected they would so testify, does it not teach a loud lesson to their successors, the democratic leaders? We think so, since Mr. Cleveland went into office we have devoted ourselves in Texas most strenuously to the business of parcelling out the federal patronage, and the desire to place it where it will do the most good for this or that interest man or ambition, has become very evident. The delicately gloved iron hand of the boss is both seen and felt already, although the touch is deft and caressing enough in all conscience. Inconvenient men are merely shelled in the federal service. Enemies are quietly thrust under the table or over the precipice, and useful friends are hooked for good places or held still to rich promises or future fat things within the gift of the "man of destiny" at Washington.

There is going to be trouble in this thing as sure as shooting if it is kept up, and it may result in turning things topsy-turvey as it did for the republicans when Davis was ushered of the lone star empire. Of course men will be solicitous and humiliating in their race after the desirable places in the public service, but this need not obscure a common appreciation of a decent fairness. There is no other thing which shortens political life as promptly or as effectually as does the reputed desire to lose things. A boss in politics lives well, but is short-lived, and a political syndicate differs from an individual boss only that there are more of them to die.

If every man in Texas got a federal position who is applying, there would not be places enough, within the gift of the federal administration to go half round.

CLEVELAND could never have constructed a cabinet to suit the critical republican mechanics. They are now busily engaged in picking the geography of his present cabinet to pieces. The main objection is that it has a good deal of southern timber in it. It takes some people a long time to find out that they are whipped.

THE Austin Sun warmly sustains Dr. Denton in his manly resentment of the wanton insult offered him and his good lady by the German paper of Austin. We regret exceedingly that the doctor failed measurably in his mission, and that the richly deserved drubbing was not administered.

MEN and Money is the title of a periodical issued by Prof. Anderson at the Capital business college of Austin. Like everything the professor does, it is well done.

THE Navasota Tablet is a most excellent weekly paper. It would be read anywhere with interest. It is very newsy and very prettily made up.

THE sun is shining and the grass hath real vigor. There is not much room for the farmers in shady fence corners.

"OLD TIGE" would indeed make a good marshal, but Jack Elgin would make a better, and that everybody knows.

THE appointment of Jackman is regarded as a black eye to the state administration.

DALLAS is attempting to run her municipal campaign on purely party plans.

Is it "aptonist" really, oh! thou Grant Richard White of the Journal?

THE Waco flower gardens are rapidly taking on gorgeous hues.

THE fruit trees are all in bloom.

THE sun "do shine."

CLIPPINGS AND COMMENTS.

THE Marlin Ball man never has not never will sit at the feet of George William Curtis, or any other civil service reform apostle. The Ball rolls in the straight and narrow path of back woodsian democracy.

The banner of the democratic party in the last campaign was painted in big letters, "The republican party must go!" The shibboleth that led them to victory was "a change of party is necessary to a reform of the government." Now that Cleveland is president he must proceed to clear the decks and make the change as the people by their ballots declared he must do. If republicans are to rule in in office what was the necessity of a change? Reform does not mean an acquiescence in the prevailing condition of affairs. It means a complete renovation of the government machinery; a weeding out and complete overhauling. Leaving men in office simply because they are there would be monstrous mockery. Cleveland cannot afford to keep republicans in office because they are good men and competent, when he can find democrats who will fill the bill.

NOTHING the criticism in certain quarters that the governor was premature in issuing his proclamation to the strikers, the Houston Journal comes to the rescue:

There is no telling what might occur, and he would be worse blamed if a riot took place and no adequate means were on hand to suppress it. There is no fairness whatever in the charge that Gov. Ireland is acting in the interest of the railroad men. It should be recognized that as the chief magistrate of the state he has a direct duty to perform in the interests of peace and order. Should he transcend this limit, then blame him; but certainly not for putting himself in opposition to do his full duty according to possible exigencies.

AMERICA'S strongest strong-minded woman has received many a rap, but it was reserved for the Lincoln Times to administer the coup de grace:

THE citizen soldier, unlike the professional bearer of arms, has a heart that sometimes blinds his eyes to the "regia" at the end of the shining barrel and causes his finger to tremble as it touches the trigger. The Evening Record, recognizing the fact, also says:

Speaking from the soldier's standpoint it is easy to say what the duty of a militiaman in the service of the state would be, when ordered by competent authority to aid in putting down labor strikes; but when the question is raised to the higher plane of human sympathy, another element enters into its consideration.

A PAPER incident of the inauguration ceremonies will live long after the colors of the bright and beautiful scene have faded and the hoarse of the brass bands has been carried away on the crest of the furthermost wave of sound. The Bolton Journal says:

President Cleveland took the oath of office with his hand resting on the bible given to him by his mother when he was fifteen years of age. The man who loves the word of God and reverences the memory of his mother will do to trust.

THE Glen Rose Citizen and Carey W. Stribel is booming Hon. Olin Wellborn for speaker. It does not hurt little Olin much, and is innocent pastime for the colonel.

THE Calvert Courier is intensely militiarian. It wouldn't appreciate the blue ribbon of the Legion of Honor half as much as it would recognition in the shape of legal tender. It says:

The president tipped his hat to the Busch Zouaves of St. Louis as they passed by. Blankets blank, blank the old hat, it's offices that the democrats of the country are anxious to have tipped in their direction just at this time.

THE TEXAS VETERAN.

19th Anniversary of the Declaration of the Independence of Texas.

Independence, March 2.—I received a letter a few days since from Gen. Walter Lane, 1st vice-president, and acting president of the veteran association, in which he writes: "Please issue a notice that owing to hard times, the city of Sherman declines to entertain us. Therefore there will be no meeting of the veterans on the 21st of April, also that the veterans will be notified where and when our next meeting will be held. I think we had better work up for San Jacinto battle ball. But in case the legislature passes the appropriation to bring back to Texas Col. Johnson's remains, we could then call on the veterans (who may see fit to come) to meet at the city of Austin, and be present at the laying of his remains in the superstructure. I received letters from McLeneny and Deffenbaugh yesterday who agree with you in saying that we will have to postpone for a year.

My notion is that there will be a general good time made this year and the 21st of April, 1886, the few remaining old Texas veterans, who fought for and maintained at their own expense the Independence of Texas for ten years, previous to annexation, may have the pleasure of spending a week together on the eventful battle field of San Jacinto, which will be the fiftieth anniversary of the victory which welled for Texas civil and religious liberty.
