FORTUNATE HUNTERS.

An Opportunity for Every One to Get Rich.

We take the following from an exchange: There is to be found at Rockport a museum of ores and products of Texas. Among these is a box containing two fine bunches of oranges. One bunch of twelve beautiful oranges was grown by that enterprising gentleman and eminent lawyer, Major W. S. Dugat. We will give their history in the Major's own language. The tree from which they were taken was brought from California in 1886 and was 18 inches high. It is of the celebrated mandarin variety. In 1889 it ripened three oranges; in 1890 it ripened seventy; and in 1891, or the fourth year of its Texas habitat, it ripened 246 splendid oranges. Major Dugat further states that the Japanese Per-simmon succeeded well last year. It blooms in November and ripens in March.

The other bunch of oranges sent by Mr. Doughty was grown by his son-in-law, Mr. Don Teas. These oranges are splendid specimens; indeed for quality and size they cannot be excelled in any country. We regret that the variety is not stated. Mr. C. P. Eidson, sends Prof. Attwater a bottle of Mustang wine of the vintage of 1831.

These products sent by the above named enterprising and progressive gentlemen to the Rockport museum are now carefully labelled and arranged in the exhibit of the coast counties of Southwest Texas and reflect great credit on the producers.

If the Rockport lands produce oranges, the land alone is worth $500 per acre, and if it is near the city of Rockport it should be worth what suburban lands are always worth as compared to those distant from commercial centers. These lands are cheap, and Texas should encourage the culture of this golden fruit. If land is good for oranges and also near a city which has every reasonable prospect for becoming a first class seaport, the far-seeing man will profit by the experience of Peter McLelland, J. W. Mann, Dr. McGregor and other wealthy men. Look to any city in this or any other country, and the wealthy men are those who owned land in it before its suburban lands began to enhance in value. Rockport for oranges and gold.

What I Know About Hardware and Runaway Book-Keepers.

To be swindled out of your goods by customers whom you consider trustworthy, is bad, but all who sell on credit must expect to suffer such losses. To be robbed by burglars or highwaymen is worse; still you have a right and a chance to defend yourself, and if you succeed to send a bullet through a robber's brains, you have rendered a valuable service to society. Worst of all is to be robbed by a trusted employee, a confidential clerk, in whom you place too much confidence. It is impossible to carry on any business without trusting in the honor of employees, and exposing yourself to robbery. I have been robbed in this way by my former book-keeper, Charles Werner. Any information disclosing his present location, will be properly rewarded, as I shall spare no pains nor expense to make him face a Waco jury. Since New Year, trade with me has been very brisk. My men have worked their fullest capacity. I have come to the conclusion that the people appreciate the fact of having in their midst one of the largest, best equipped and best managed hardware stores in the state, where they always can find what they want, and secure the lowest prices, either in small, or wholesale lots.

Yours for hardware,
E. STRAUSS.
