At Least That Is What the President Advises

IN HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

A Strong Presentation of the Case Against Chile--Democrats in a "Hole" and Can Not Escape--Chile Wants to Arbitrate, Says a London Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.--The long expected message of the president on the Chilean matter came to congress Monday. Several days ago it was stated that the message would have been sent in had not congress taken a recess. So it was known that it would come in Monday and as a consequence the galleries in both chambers were filled to overflowing with those who had come to hear it. The congressmen paid much more attention to the reading of the document than they generally do to communications from the white house and nearly all of them were in their seats, which is something unusual for the first hour after a three days' recess.

The crowd in the galleries were greatly delighted with the contents of the message and made their approbation of it known by long and vociferous applause.

The message is agreed on all sides to be a very strong presentation of the case against Chile, and defends the reasons for the president's ultimatum with consummate ability and force. He takes up the evidence in the case of the Baltimore's sailors and handles it like a strong district attorney, with Chile as the defendant, and presents the whole as good grounds for his demand on Chile for redress. He announces that he adheres to his views that the dignity of the people requires this redress, and as Chile had not made it or showed any inclination to make it, he felt bound to submit the matter to congress.

There can now be no doubt whatever that

Harrison Is for War.

His message is taken as evidence that he is anxious for trouble.

It has been said for a month or more that Blaine has done all in his power to repress the warlike spirit of Harrison, and the eminent secretary has been quoted as saying that if Harrison would keep his hands off for a while the whole matter could be satisfactorily adjusted by arbitration. Blaine has been sailing under a vigorous foreign policy flag for many years, but those who know his character well have always said that he would never permit a war.

With Harrison the case seems to be different. He sniffed the battle and, ruling out any suggestions of Mr. Blaine, he shows his desire to engage in it.

The general opinion is that

We Will Have War.

The president has put the Democrats in the house in a "hole" from which there is at present no escape. He had the advantage of making up his case and he made it up so strongly that the country will render its verdict in behalf of his contention. The Democratic house under his showing cannot refuse war, and it will go ahead with it, too. This can be relied upon. There are many congressmen who in their innermost souls sneer at a war with such a weak little bantling as Chile, and who would if they dared sneer that the country might see and hear them.

But this is a presidential year. Harrison shows that our country has been and the intimation is that no country could stand such treatment without loss of prestige as a nation. He represents the Republican party. The inference is that he and his party are willing to strike back. The Democrats cannot hang back on the breaching in such a crisis as this.

From conversation with congressmen who are conservative I am convinced that only one thing can prevent a war and that is that Chile will head off congress by complying at once with the demands of the president.

It is generally believed that England offered her services as mediator, but the case was one that presented no grounds for mediation. Chile must promise indemnity for outrages on the Baltimore's sailors, must withdraw the offensive note of Matta and must apologize. She has shown no inclination to apologize and she has been unsatisfactory in her answers in all things.

The general impression is that she will not comply with the demands. She is satisfied she can whip anything in South America and is under the impression that she can give the great republic of the north a fight that she will not forget. There is no uneasiness about the result as far as Chile is concerned, but there is an undercurrent of fright through fear that before we are done we may become involved in a row with some European power. Then we would have a quarrel that would make the jingoes turn pale.

More About the Message.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.--The president sent his message to congress yesterday, accompanying the Chilean correspondence, which was very bulky. The message contains 6000 words and is conservative, but firm. The president in his message says the attention of the Chilean government was called to the offensive character of a note addressed by Mr. Matta, its minister of foreign affairs, to Mr. Montt, its minister at this capital, on the 11th ult. This dispatch was not officially communicated to this government, but as Mr. Montt was to translate and give it to the press of this country: "I have notified the Chilean government that unless this note is at once withdrawn and an apology as public as the offense made, I will terminate the diplomatic relations." The president also defends the action of Minister Egan and sees no reason for his recall.

Review of the Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.--The correspondence accompanying the president's message is in great volume, and would probably fill more than 100 columns of an ordinary newspaper. It dates back as far as Aug. 15, 1890, and much of it has been described with sufficient accuracy in the president's message sent to congress at the beginning of the present session and copious newspaper publications that have been made. It is divided into three portions, the first comprising the correspondence between Blaine and Egan, or Wharton in Blaine's absence, the correspondence between Senor Lazcano, Chilean minister under Balmaceda, and lastly the notes exchanged between Blaine and Montt, the present Chilean minister to Washington.

Successful Torpedo Test.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 26.--The first flask of domestic manufacture for 100 Whitehead torpedoes for the navy, was tested at the works of the E. W. Bliss company last Friday. It is 56 feet long, 17 1/2 inches in diameter with a shell 34-100 of an inch thick and made by the Bethlehem Iron company. Having successfully withstood the test the flask was accepted by the navy department. The test consisted in filling the flask with oil and subjecting it to a pressure of 2025 pounds to the square inch. The shell withstood the pressure without leakage and the cylinder retained its original dimensions when the pressure was removed. The contract for 100 torpedo firing flasks will shortly be awarded by the navy department. It took the European ordnance men a generation to perfect a flask, but the Bethlehem Iron company was successful in the first attempt.
