Sample pages of Mr. E. H. Fox's Souvenir of Waco have been received and they are very beautiful and attractive. Those who subscribed for them will not be disappointed.

The meeting in the Fifth ward re-nominated Mr. Latimer. He certainly is the choice of the Fifth warders, as they have now twice nominated him by an overwhelming majority.

It is only a short time before the United States court will convene and there is as yet only a few papers filed. It would be well for the legal fraternity to remember that Friday, April 1, is the last day of service.

Mr. Charles McGregor, Waco's talented young artist, has just finished a magnificent picture entitled "Listening to the Fairies" which he will have on exhibition in his studio in the Provident building for a few days. The picture was sold before it was finished.

There was a hearty rumor on the streets this morning that the Texas Central had perfected a deal with the Missouri Kansas & Texas and would shortly enter the city on their tracks via Geneva. The rumor doubtless emanated from a suggestion made by a prominent railroader that it would be a great saving to both roads to have a connecting switch at some point near Ross where the two roads are only a short distance apart. It was however only a suggestion and at that by a gentleman having no connection with the track building of either road. Another rumor was that the Texas Central had or would purchase the old Waco Female College and use it for depot grounds. An attempt at verification proved it to be only rumor.

QUESTIONS AFFECTING THE RACE FOR MAYOR.

A Few Points of Interest to the Public—Plain Statement of Facts from Competent Authority—Mayor McCulloch's Circular Letter.

For third time I appear in print in advocacy of my candidacy. In no other relation of life would I permit myself to be put upon the defensive, so much as in this case. It is a necessary condition with the office-holder. Being in, he must stand a siege of the "outs."

In my two previous statements I have shown the true inwardness of the financial situation. I will not recapitulate my arguments therein but reprint the two papers, with this, and simply refer to them.

I may add that the bonds, about which so much has been said, and which appear to give my enemies so much solicitude, are practically in Waco now. The keys to the New York safety deposit box, containing them, are in the hands of City Secretary Joney Jones, and the keys, are in effect, the bonds. The considerable cost of bringing them back to Waco is a useless expenditure of the people's money. This would also involve the cost of returning them to New York when sold.

Part of the aldermen claimed they could sell the bonds at a much higher price than the one I obtained. More than three months have expired and they have failed to accomplish it. I will give a prize to any of these gentlemen who will sell them for as much as I did. They will not bring as much again until time enough has elapsed for the country to recuperate.

Now, who committed the blunder? The interest of the city is being slaughtered for political ends.

Baker, Herbert, Jones and Payne of the council say I was correct. The city attorney says so; eminent legal talent of Waco and New York have decided in my favor—that I had a right to sell; common sense, justice and honesty dictates to us that the contract should have been complied with.

I claim the right of re-election, for many reasons. Waco was struggling under the serious inconvenience necessarily belonging to a city without a charter; its general incorporation gave it only the functions of a town. It could not levy needed taxes to defray bond issue. The fines assessed by its courts were subject to revision. It was a big tortoise without a shell, subject to the harpoon of anybody. When the struggle was made to get the enactment of a special charter, there was serious opposition, headed by talent of high order.

When did the people obtain their rights without fighting for them? How I fought, some of my friends understand.
I went to Austin and returned sadder, older, I hope wiser, and I got the charter. It was one clause in that instrument that procured the free bridge, because it paved the way to end the litigation, which would most likely have been in the courts today.

I do not claim to have done all. Waco has proved a success. Its great buildings are springing up like magic palace. Its business is increasing. Under my administration Waco did not march toward its goal. It leaped forward, and that, too, under most disastrous conditions. Its growth was in spite of, not by the aid of circumstances. The small-pox horror intervened. Who did the people and the aldermen shoulder with the responsible trust of saving the citizens from that dangerous scourge?

My course was endorsed by the physician of Waco, State health officer Ruherford, and Gov. L. S. Ross. Other troubles came, reinforced by a period of financial depression, worse than the sequel of Black Friday. The state government's mal-administration caused railway building to cease; cotton fell into the bottomless pit. In the face of all that, while I have been its chief executive, Waco has grown, prospered and become the queen city, envied by all, suffering only in her credit, which was stabbed by bogus Romans seeking to stab me.
C. C. McCULLOCH.

IN EAST WACO.
Mr. E. W. Latimer is Re-Nominated. Speeches by the Candidates.

The meeting held in the Fifth ward, last night, was only a reiteration of the meeting held earlier in the week. At this meeting, however, there were no nominations made. In this way each voter voted for the man of his choice whether nominated or not. When the ballots were counted it was found that Mr. S. W. Latimer had received six more votes than all others combined. The motion was then made and carried that the nomination be made unanimous. The names of Mr. Latimer's opponents were Sam Smith, W. D. Wallace, W. H. Turner and J. R. Mobley.

After the closing of the balloting the candidates for mayor were called on to speak. Judge J. C. West was the first called and was followed by Mayor McCulloch, Major Herbert and Mr. R. J. Goode in the order named. The speeches were spirited and lively and evoked roars of laughter and rounds of applause from friends of the different candidates.
The meeting was presided over by W. D. Wallace as chairman and W. C. Cooper as secretary.
