YOUNG GIRL ASSAULTED.

A Fiend in Human Shape Brutally Assaults a Mere Child.

LONDON, April 6.—A thirteen year old girl was assaulted this morning on a train. She and an unknown man were the sole occupants of the car. The man drew her into conversation and finally made improper propositions to her. She rejected his advances, whereupon he seized her and despite her resistance and cries for help, which were drowned by the rumbling of the train, brutally assaulted her. When she escaped from his grasp she jumped out of foot board and shrieked for help. The man became alarmed, got on the foot-board and steadying himself for a moment jumped off the train. Occurrence narrated created great excitement and search was made for the man, but no trace of him has been found. The girl's clothing was disarranged and she was quieted so far as possible, and then she explained as above.

A BRIDGE GIVES AWAY.

And Precipitates Five Men and a Woman into Tennessee River.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 6.—The west span of the Clarissa street bridge across Tennessee river in this city fell this morning precipitating six persons five men and one woman into the river which is now at flood height. The work of rescue was accomplished with remarkable promptness the poor unfortunate clinging to piers or boards had reached a point in the river opposite Adams street before they were taken out. The woman was a Mrs. Quigley.

AUSTIN LETTER.

The Political Buncumbe Racket Played

BY THE ADMINISTRATION

Cohorts at the Capital City—On that Plea They try to Defeat an Effort to Preserve to the People the Inalienable Right to Choose their Officials—The Eloquent Garwood on the International Steam.

Special Correspondent to The News:

AUSTIN, April 5.—There seems to be considerable difference of opinion as to what is understood by the term "political buncumbe" as an instance of this difference of opinion it is only necessary to call attention to a concurrent resolution which Senator W. W. Searcy introduced yesterday in the senate. His resolution set forth the idea that the intelligent of the land who believe in a government by the people, are partial to an elective railroad commission. Mr. Searcy is well aware that only last session a railroad commission law was passed in which provision was made for the appointment of these officers by the governor of the state. Not only Mr. Searcy, but the intelligent and interested spectator of current affairs were convinced long ago that the majority of the Democrats of Texas were unwilling to surrender their inalienable right to name by direct consent the public servant. The members of the Twenty-second legislature were aware of this sentiment among the people, yet like dumb driven cattle they first allowed the chief executive to get them by shrewd management into a trap by which he obtained their acquiescence to the appointive plan, and then once committed they were powerless under the common rules of consistency to vote their real choice in the matter. The governor owned body and soul the Twenty-second legislature—or a majority, which is the practical demonstration of the statement—and he forced an appointive commission upon the entire people of the state.

With this history before him, senator Searcy introduced his resolution believing that its subject matter was eminently germane to the legislation that is demanded by the Democracy of the land. But how was it received? The most eminent leader of the Hogg tyranny shot up like a meteor and denounced the resolution as "political buncumbe." He thought it only designed to stir up strife and unfriendly feeling. That senator is perhaps the most interesting speaker in the senate, and who is, on all matters that cannot be infected by the Hogg miasma, a fair and useful representative.

This is the senator from Johnson, M. M. Crane, a quiet and good man, but he, like many of the eminent men of this and past generations, has some great weakness that greatly mars the symmetry of that which might otherwise be a magnificent specimen. When the vote was taken there were only 25 senators present. Eighteen of these voted "aye" and six voted "no." Three who were in the chamber refused to vote at all; these latter were Ingram, Kimbrough and Burney. The six voting against the resolution are Crane, Finch, Frank, Harrison, McKinney and Weisiger. Senator Atlee was absent, but says that if he had been present he would have voted for the amendment. Senator Carter says that he would have voted against it if he had been present.

It is safe to predict that the resolution will fail to pass in the house.

The chief executive of this state whose influence like the arms of Briarins reaches out and holds within its deadly embrace some of the dearest interests of the people, and who has waved above the heads of the Twenty-second fiasco the magic wand of a mephisto, has no drowsy syrup that he can place to the lips of one brave and brilliant young hero and his name is Hiram M. Garwood of Bastrop county. Last night was the grandest epoch of his young life. It was the occasion previously designat-

BROOKS & COWAN,

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

A Boiler Bursts and a Number of Men are Injured.

LONG ISLAND CITY, April 6.—At 9 o'clock this morning a fearful accident occurred in the yard of the Long Island Railroad here. Engine 49 while standing near the shops suddenly blew up with tremendous report. Eight men were injured and several of them it is thought fatally. The locomotive was completely wrecked and parts of the boiler and iron work of engine were hurled in every direction some distance in the yard. Some of the men injured were struck by these flying pieces while others were badly scalded. The engineer and firemen who were at their post of duty were blown a considerable distance, and are among those supposed to have been fatally injured. None of the names of the injured have been learned. Men injured were picked up and carried into the shops of the railroad company where they were attended by half dozen physicians from Long Island City, and Green Point. Ambulances were summoned from St. Johns hospital in Long Island City and from St. Catherines hospital, Williamsburg. The cause of the accident is believed to have been lowness of water in the boiler. The railroad company refuses to give any information.

No one has been able to tell the real story of the explosion but from appearances the locomotive fire box exploded downward blowing out furnace door. Hot coal, sand and steam covered five men in the cab and they were thrown in all directions. Five men were fatally injured two of whom are expected to die momentarily.

ed for the receipt of a report on the international and great northern receivership investigation. Senator Page moved the adoption of the minority report, and speaking to this motion Senator Garwood recited his connection with the investigation as a member of the investigating committee from the senate, and embellished his eloquent lines with a lofty exhortation that could only fall from the lips of truth and from a heart that spurned all that is ignoble and depraved. The full text of his great address can be found in the Galveston News of today, and your correspondent refers to it with a hearty endorsement of every line, and firmly believes that the honest people of Texas will not only condemn all the actors in this disgraceful affair, but they will sooner or later hold Governor Hogg responsible for having attempted to shield these malefactors, who are his personal friends, from the disgrace that will surely follow.

Alternately some member of the administration appears on the floor of one of the branches of the legislature. They pretend not to talk politics, but they come and go with a machine-like regularity that creates a strong suspicion that they are acting under the direction of one common head. Foster comes one day, Reagan another, McLean another. Then Hogg appears—later McLaughy, and thus through the full list.

It may be remarked that Governor Hogg did not hear the Garwood speech. And it is useless to say that the railroad robbers of Tyler were not present.

A veritable family medicine box, BEECHAM'S PILLS.
