TO PRESERVE HEALTH.

WHAT EVERY ONE SHOULD KNOW AND HOW TO Apply our Knowledge—A Treatise On the Principles of Sanitary Science—With Incidental Consideration of Causes Affecting the Healthfulness of Our Homes.

"What every one should know" are those practical handy way of doing, ignorance of which necessitates so much extra labor, trouble anxiety and expense.

In the common daily experience of every one there are hundreds of occasions when a knowledge of sanitary science, would add largely to the success, comfort or safety of life. The comfort, luxury and beauty of the household can be largely increased by a little study of this science.

For many centuries physicians had a practical monopoly of what little was known of the conditions affecting the public health, and there seems to have been no incentive to original investigation and experiment, even if the means of prosecuting an inquiry so important to all classes of the people.

To the science of chemistry we owe the greatest part of what has already been learned and placed upon record, of the truths which form the basis of sanitary success. Those to whom the sanitarium must look for the practical application of carefully elaborated theories of sanitary reform, are the very ones who are now beginning to appreciate most fully the importance of sanitary science. In all classes of society, except those which include the degraded and ignorant, we find a growing interest in the means of guarding against all unhealthful conditions in person, house and environments with a large wisdom and clearer insight into the cause of things, which have come, of progress in scientific thought, intelligent people do not now attribute the consequences of their own neglect and carelessness to the "allusive" dispensations of providence, which are "mysterious and past finding out."

We are beginning to understand how large a proportion of the diseases which afflict humanity, results from preventable causes, and that it is possible, by judicious measures of sanitary reform, to so reduce the death rate as to materially increase the average duration of human life, nor is this interest in sanitary reform bounded and limited by a narrow selfishness. There is something broadly humanitarian in it. The rich and middle classes no longer feel that they have no interest in the welfare and comfort of those who endure the misery and utter wretchedness of squalid poverty. Disease is no respecter of persons, and a "fever nest," in some remote and neglected quarter of a populous city may dispatch invisible messengers of death which poison the air of broad avenues and cleanly swept streets miles distant. The enlightened self-interest which is leading so many intelligent men and women to study the laws of health is exactly the reverse of selfishness, since every movement for general sanitary reform, begins with the improvement of the houses of the poor and ignorant, who can only be redeemed from untimely death, and saved from being the instruments of spreading the seeds of disease and contagion, when those who occupy the social planes above them stretch forth a helping hand to lift them out of the mire into which they have fallen.

When we look about us and see how much remains to be done before the masses of the people shall be emancipated from the dire necessity of living under conditions prejudicial to health and consequently to happiness it would almost seem as if the task of the sanitarium is a hopeless one. Such is not the case, however. We turn with a shudder of horror from the records of the past to contemplate with satisfaction the progress we have already made. People often wonder why we do not have such fearful visitations of epidemics at the present day as the plague of London, the ancient spotted fevers, sweating sickness, leprosy etc. We forget that we are not yet free from the cholera, the yellow fever, typhoid fever, small-pox, la grippe, diphtheria and other preventable diseases, and it may be that the next generation may see that our disregard of nature laws affected our death rate as surely as the dirt and filth of London caused the great plague. The protection of the public health by means of the proper removal and disposal of household and town wastes is becoming a question of the first importance in this country. It has occupied the attention of the leading medical and engineering authorities in Europe for many years. In many respects the ancients were wiser in sanitary science than the modern. No nation ever had a code of laws embodying so much of sound, practical wisdom as the Jews under Moses and his immediate successors. The more we learn of nature's laws the better we understand and appreciate the importance of regulations established for the government of the tribes of Israel in their long journeying after the exodus from Egypt.

THE TOOLS FOUND.

The Chest of Carpenter Tools Stolen From W. H. Blake is Recovered by Deputy Press Standifer.

This morning Deputy Sheriff Press Standifer went down the river about four miles to the "Blue Hole" and arrested John Henry Williams charged with the theft of a chest of tools. On reaching the camp the box was found in another box hidden underneath a quantity of bed clothes. There is no doubt about the identity of the tools as all of them are plainly stamped with the owners name. Williams claims that the property was stolen by another man, whose name the officers have, and that he purchased it from him not knowing that it was stolen. The tools it will be remembered were stolen one night about two months ago from a house being erected by Dr. Hathaway on Provident Heights. The tools were of very fine make and there was over $100 worth in the box. Ever since the theft the officers have been working on the case and have at last, they think, succeeded in capturing the guilty party.

THE JURY DISCHARGED.

The Melton-Dunlap Jury Stood Seven for Conviction and Five for Acquittal.

The jury in the case of the State of Texas vs. Melton and Dunlap came in this morning and reported that they could not agree. They stood seven for conviction and five for acquittal. They were being tried on a charge of murdering Chick McLennan on the night of May 2, 1891. The case is rather a peculiar one. The two defendants had had trouble with some one and were expecting an assault and in the dark they mistook the unfortunate McLennan for their enemy and thought that he was following them with the purpose of shooting them. In reality McLennan had not noticed the men until they fired upon him. The case will be brought up at the next term of court.

CONTEST AT BELLVIEW.

Third Party Men Refuse to Put the Test and There Will be two Delegations.

BELLVIEW, May 13.—The citizens of Bellview met yesterday for the purpose of electing delegations to the county convention tomorrow in Waco and upon the proposition made by the Democrats present that the test adopted by the executive committee be put to all the voters present several dissented and upon vote those opposed to applying the test elected a chairman who ruled out of order a motion to apply the test as to whether those participating would support the ticket.

Mr. W. S. Ewing after the above ruling by the chair, proposed that all the Democrats present retire from the convention until the Union Labor people got through and then meet again and elect Democratic delegates. All the Democrats withdrew with Mr. Ewing and those remaining presided over by Mr. B. D. Herring who was a candidate for county clerk four years ago on the Union Labor ticket, proceeding to elect W. Q. Christian and L. A. Davis delegates and B. D. Herring and J. M. Dasher alternates.

After they got through the Democrats who had retired were called together by G. F. Durr and J. Bun Brown was elected chairman. The test as to whether they would support the nominees of the party was applied and all present agreed to support the Democratic ticket.

The meeting then proceeded to elect delegates as follows: G. F. Burr and J. W. Cooper delegates, W. S. Erwin and J. C. Denton alternates.

They instructed for Judge Gerald for congress condemned Hogg's administration and endorsed Clark for governor.

HEALING WATERS.

A New York Gentleman Cured in Waco.

DEAR SIR—I arrived in your city last November with inflammatory rheumatism, my lungs also being affected with rheumatic fever. I was given up to die and sent to Texas to prolong my life. Hearing of the benefits derived from the artesian baths in your natorium I went through a course of twenty-one baths. Before I undertook to take the baths I weighed 106 pounds, was very sick, with a poor appetite. After the tenth bath I could eat four good meals every day. I weigh today 123 pounds, am in the best of health and will start for New York June 1. Thanking you and all the people in Waco for the benefit I derived in your city, for what it has done for me since I have been here. Very respectfully, JAMES GREEHY, 137 East 117th street, New York City.
