THE NEWS will take advertising with the understanding that if it has not a larger local circulation than any daily paper published in Waco, no charge will be made for the advertisement.

Galveston went for Hogg, and Galveston is a large city.

That cause is weak, indeed, that bases its sole hope of success on the prejudices of a people.

George Clark has proven that he is the people's friend without pandering to the sentiment hostile to capital.

Ex-Senator Chilton is loading a dynamite bomb when he advocates the adoption of the majority rule in the nominating convention.

As Judge Aldredge says, "Clark is a peculiar man and one peculiarity of his is that he generally gets what he goes after. He is after Hogg's political scalp and he will have it."

George Clark's defense of the people's homes will win for him the support and lasting gratitude of the occupant of the "cabin by the wayside."

All industry is paralyzed, business stagnated and capital fled, from the effects of one term of Hogg and "do as I please-ism." We shudder to think what would be the effects of a second term.

The Fifth ward in Houston, the railroad ward of the city, went for Hogg. It was the only ward in Houston carried by the governor. This doesn't confirm the statement made by Hogg that the railroad men were afraid to support him.

The fact that the proposition to abolish the two-thirds rule comes from the supporters of Gov. Hogg shows they do not expect to get more than a majority in the convention. Their proposition will be heard of no more forever when they find they have not even a majority.

As the wave of popular opinion sweeps on and county after county instructs for the little Waco giant, even the most pig-headed of the opposition cannot mistake the signs of the times, and their utmost and most desperate, but futile endeavors are now being made in the vain hope of locking the convention at Houston.

It seems to us that Gov. Hogg had better be at home attending to some of those numerous things that he intends to do if re-elected, than spending his time inflicting the dear people with an attempted justification of his mis-administration. If he does not do them now he never will, for "there is a tide in the affairs of governors which taken at the flood leads down to private life," and he is seated on the very crest of it beyond the reach of hope or help.

The Clark men in Galveston made an open, honest fight Wednesday night, and the Hogg men worked under cover. The Clark men had their headquarters at the Tremont hotel. The Hogg men's headquarters were unknown to anybody but a few of the managers. Walter Gresham is a delegate from the Eleventh ward and Miles Crowley is a delegate from the Fifth. The city and county of Galveston are in the grasp of these two men, one a railroad magnate and the other a ward heeler. The "influence" that circulates through such mediums is legal tender.

THE DALLAS NEWS CROP REPORT.

The Dallas News of yesterday contained fifteen columns set in nonpariel type giving the condition and relative acreage compared with last year of the crop of Texas. The enterprise of the News in collecting and printing this valuable and interesting information is without a parallel in the South and has been seldom equaled anywhere. One has the fields of Texas, an empire within itself, before his eyes when he gazes at this magnificent report. A summary of this voluminous matter is as follows:

"The crop report represents 393 neighborhoods, covering the cotton and small grain counties of the state. The cotton acreage in 276 neighborhoods shows a decrease varying from 5 to 75 per cent; in 10 localities an increase of from 10 to 300 per cent, and at 46 points the same acreage as last season. The increase is principally in sod lands. The average decrease is 21.42.

As a rule there was sufficient rain during the seeding period to insure a good stand. The season is between two and three weeks late. The spring drouth did no damage other than retard planting and prevent germination and growth of plant. In many localities replanting was necessary owing to cold waves and hailstorms. The present condition of the plant is fully up to last year's May average.

The great majority of the reports indicate clean fields and that farmers are well up with their work. Moisture was needed at the time the reports were made up, but since then root soaking rains have been general except in portions of the southwest, west central and northwest sections of the state, that are pastoral rather than farming districts. The rain will be of great benefit, improving the condition of cotton fully 8 per cent.

Cut worms are reported in Hardin, Polk, San Jacinto, Caldwell, Medina and Maverick counties.

Wheat and oats in the grain belt proper are fine and promise a better yield per acre than last year. The proposed acreage in wheat was cut short by drouth, but the acreage as compared with last season is about the same. The acreage of oats shows an increase of 20 per cent. Wheat is finely headed and the indications are that the quality of the grain will be better than for years. Outside of the small grain belt proper the crops are short, the greatest decrease being in wheat. The straw is short but the plant as a rule well headed. In some localities both wheat and oats are total failures.

The condition of other crops are promising. Sugar cane is doing finely on an increased acreage. Corn is healthy and vigorous, and the acreage increase is about proportionately as large as the decrease in cotton. Some of the crop reports note that farmers are turning their attention to vegetable gardens to the neglect of cotton. Castor beans are being experimented with. Fruit promises a half crop."

Governor Hogg in his attempt at a speech at Paris on the 6th, when accused of appointing Chilton to the senate because he was not embarrassed (tainted) with a Confederate record, replied that "I appointed Horace Chilton because I wanted to," and then gently inquired in dulcet tones, "Does that satisfy you?" We take pleasure in pointing to this one time in which his excellency (goaded to it by the spur of the moment, no doubt), has told the truth. He very evidently appointed Chilton "because he wanted to," as there could be no other reason, and yet there are a great number of people so unreasonable as to suppose that there might be even better reasons for appointing a senator than because our executive willed it. This seems to be a very popular reason of our governor's, and explains a great many of his actions. And still we are not satisfied.

Hogg's pitiable effort to array the country against the towns is very amusing. He attempts to work on credulity and prejudice only bringing the contempt they so richly merit down on himself. The farmer is possessed of intelligence to vote and act for himself, and he proposes to do it. He keeps informed on all issues, and all attempts to mislead him with false cries or side-track him on dead issues only meet the scorn of the farmer, and the failure they deserve. The farmer has been an equal sufferer under the present mis-administration, and he is not to be deceived by loud words and false pretenses. He knows that the commission law is engrafted in the constitution beyond the power of forty governors to remove it were they so inclined, and the cry raised by Hogg and his fuglemen that "the commission is in danger" is as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals to their ears. Hogg will learn after a while that the farmers are not fools, and will cease to make himself ridiculous.

The Galveston "machine" was well lubricated.

All the organ factories in the country are now turning out Cleveland organs.

Hogg is responsible for the situation, but Judge Clark holds the key to it. Elect Clark.

Waco has taken care of seven conventions within the past thirty days. Waco is the convention centre of Texas.

Texas was "held up" by that Prince of Political Highwayman, James S. Hogg. The people of Texas are coming to the rescue.

Cowboys Make a Conductor "Dance."
A band of cowboys in Montana had long noticed a course of behavior on the part of a Northern Pacific train conductor which they determined not to tolerate. The conductor did the worst thing, in a cowboy's opinion, that any man could do—he acted like a dude; he "put on style." He actually went so far as to swing himself off the cars before they stopped, and, with one arm extended and head offensively erect, would shout: "Dingleville! All out for Dingleville!" His whole manner was artificial, affected and unbearable.

This being noticed—and no one is quicker to notice the hollow trickery of an eastern man than cowboys are—the boys decided to "take him down." So one day they assembled on the station platform in a semi-circular line, into the curve of which he must run as he leaped from the moving cars. The conductor did as he was expected to, the cowboys surrounded him, and he was hidden to dance.

"Dance!" they shouted. "Dance, or we'll shoot the toes off you!"
At the words each cowboy pulled his pistol and began shooting down into the platform planks, not exactly at the conductor's feet, but so as to narrowly miss them. They blazed away and he danced, until, after he was all but exhausted and they had no more shots to fire, they bade him go on with the train and never "show up" at Dingleville until he could behave like a man.—Julian Ralph in Harper's Weekly.

Wales' Study.
The Prince of Wales' private study at Sandringham is anything but pretentious. It is one of the smallest rooms in the house and is lit by a large single window. The woodwork is of all light oak and the walls and ceiling of a neutral tint. There are no hangings, no bric-a-brac, no ornaments of any kind, no soft rugs even on the oaken floor. The principal piece of furniture is a solid, square oaken desk, at which the prince writes all his private letters.
The prince's wastebasket is odd. It is from a design furnished by his royal highness and resembles a huge chimney pot. There are no books in the room, but a huge collection of pipes and cigars is arranged on shelves. A telephone connects Sandringham with Marlborough House, and is fixed by the side of the study window.

Paper from Cornhusks.
The husk of Indian corn is being used in the manufacture of paper. In some experiments to test this use the husks were thrown into a rotary boiler, and after being mixed with caustic soda and thoroughly boiled they form a kind of spongy paste, full of glutinous substance. This paste was then placed in a hydraulic press, so as to separate the gluten from the fiber. A compact mass of fiber was then obtained, which is worked in various ways.—New York Telegram.
