MRS. B. J. DOSS,

What I Know About Hardware and the Anarchy of Prices.

Modern production and distribution has been so rapidly and completely revolutionized that even the wisest and coolest heads can adapt themselves to changed conditions only with great difficulty. When a commodity has reached the lowest prices in the history of the trade and all producers and shippers are howling that they are losing money, and you think it is time to lay in a big supply, instead of the expected advance, the very bottom is knocked out again and you hold your goods for lower prices. About the time you have found out that all past experience is worthless, and have lost faith in all prices, and you let your stock run down to its lowest ebb, you are confronted with an unexpected advance. It is the unknown quantity, the unexpected that continually happens, which makes success in business harder than ever.

With Dodd's Patent Blind Worker you can open and close your blinds wholly or partially from the inside without raising your windows. Pullman's Patent Sash Balances keep your sash balanced without weights or cord. They are cheap, simple and do not get out of order. My rapid harness mender will mend your harness instantly without tools except a hammer or hatchet. A 25 cent box will last you a year. I am still offering a reward of $50 for any information leading to the arrest of my former book-keeper, Charles Werner.

Yours for hardware,

ED. STRAUSS,

Corner Fourth and Mary Streets.

DALLAS SCREEN CO.

A Remedy That Is Free.

A remedy against foot and mouth disease has been devised by Dr. Morandi, of Milan, recommended by the Italian board of agriculture and tried on more than 400 farms in Italy with complete success. Dr. Morandi's method, briefly summarized, is as follows: Put sufficient thyme in a barrel or cask of pure cold water for forty-eight hours, draw off the solution, wash the animal's feet and mouth first with cold water, then with the said solution. Dr. Morandi wishes his remedy to be made known gratuitously far and wide.—London Tit-Bits.

A Modiste Explanation.

Mrs. Bedford-Chord—I see that after making me a gown and a tea jacket of that silk you had enough left to make curtains for your waiting room window, Mme. Longbill. I won't complain if you will tell me why Mme. Cutwell refused to touch that silk and said there was not enough of it for even a gown.

Mme. Longbill (calmly)—Probably Mme. Cutwell's waiting room has two windows. —Kate Field's Washington.
