Great Loom End Sale

The Wonder of the Day

Competition wonders how we can do it. Some people say we don't do it. But kind friends let us say to you here that you are not compelled to buy, just come and see for yourself, and buy what you positively know is cheaper than you can find elsewhere.

Clothing.

Those Hart, Schaffner & Marx Suits, worth from $15 up to $22.50 at $12.48, are getting low, you better hurry.

Still a few left of those Cheviots, Worsteds, Cassimers and Meltons, former price from $14 to $20.

Have you seen those Boy's Suits; all kinds worth much more. Sale price only $2.98. Get busy.

Many other rare values too numerous to mention, but if you will come in we can convince you.

Dry Goods

are now cheaper than ever and The Great Loom End Sale will afford you the greatest opportunity you have ever had to buy seasonable merchandise at prices lower than ever.

Everything reduced, nothing reserved.

But on account of lack of space we can not quote you all of our prices but we wish to show you.

This sale will be the greatest event in the merchandising history of the Panhandle and we have used every efforts to make it the grandest success of any like occurrence ever taken place in the entire surrounding country. COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF.

REARING THE CHICKS.

Importance of Cleanliness in the Poultry Yards.

Perfect cleanliness is of the highest importance in the poultry yards and houses during the entire year, but is especially necessary in the sultry summer months, when every detail should be carefully attended to which may be of any possible benefit to the growth and development of the young stock. Fowls which have the very best of food and care in other respects will not thrive when confined in unclean and ill ventilated houses and pens, writes W. H. Works in American Poultry Journal. Cleanliness is highly necessary in the rearing of young chicks, no matter whether they are intended for exhibition stock, for breeders or for the market.

By cleanliness is not meant the use of a large quantity of disinfectants which may give the appearance of cleanliness, although these are undoubtedly good to use in connection with the care of the poultry quarters. Cleanliness is of such great account in the summer that in many cases it may mean the saving of the life of a chick as well as the health and growth, for cleanliness is the foe of vermin, and vermin is the cause of a majority of the poultry losses and diseases.

The houses for the young stock should be dry and well ventilated, and the chicks should be kept from crowding and taught to go on the roosts as soon as possible, so that there will be no danger of deformed breastbones caused by overcrowding. The brood coops and brooders should receive much of the poultryman's attention during the hot season, and the little chicks should have clean, dry straw on the floors of their coops and also plenty of fresh air and shade.

Lime is one of the best things to use in the houses, either in the form of whitewash or sprinkled about the floor as a powder. Carbolic acid is also a good disinfectant, and kerosene should be used in the fight against lice and mites. The chicks need to be dusted with insect powder and their dusting places sprinkled with it. The yards should be dug up often and disinfected with lime and carbolic acid, so that the ground will not become old and full of disease germs.

The Useful Coleus.

Coleus grown in the house is not so popular as it deserves to be, for we have grown so used to masses of the common richly colored foliage, with its yellow, purple and crimson bordering our flower beds in summer, that we scarcely give it its just due as an individual plant.

The plants grow so rapidly that they will fill up many a vacant spot in a window box where more exacting ones refuse to thrive.

Handling Eggs.

In cold weather gather the eggs often in order that they do not get chilled, says Dr. L. Watson in American Poultry Journal. Keeping eggs lowers their vitality. If kept at too low a temperature the chilling injures them. If, on the other hand, the temperature is too warm development begins. Just the proper temperature to hold the eggs at intended for hatching is not known, that generally recognized as best being between 55 and 65 degrees F. If kept in too dry a room eggs evaporate moisture very rapidly. They should, therefore, not be exposed to a direct draft of air. They should be turned daily in order to prevent the yolks adhering to the shell, in which case the vitelline membrane may become ruptured when eggs are turned. Eggs should prove fertile and may be saved for hatching four days after the male has been placed in the breeding pen.

The Dust Bath.

A dust bath should be provided in every breeding pen and should consist of a shallow box 5 by 4 feet, in which you place sand, ashes and some sulphur and a little insect powder. This should be shaded in the summer time. Keep dry and have a cover to take on and off in the winter months. Neglect of the bath means an increase of the fowl fleas, which, unlike the blood mites, which are only found out at night and hide away during the day, live on the body of the hen and drain it of much of the egg forming elements. These parasites lay countless small white eggs on the downy part of the feathers, especially under the wings and near the vent. In the early autumn, when the birds usually lose their old feathers, these eggs are carried all about the farm, are duly hatched and return to the houses.

Granulated Meat For Poultry.

For those who have neither time nor opportunity to prepare meat in other forms for their poultry the prepared granulated stuff is an excellent substitute and is so cheap that it should never be left out of the diet for growing chickens and for winter layers, says A. V. Meersch in Western Poultry Journal. It is made either from horseflesh or from the offal of cattle and is a composition of flesh and bone boiled up and dried and then pressed into blocks, afterward being passed through a mill to be broken up into convenient sizes. It is so prepared that it will keep fresh and sweet for some considerable time, and when chickens are fed entirely on dry food it is convenient to give them their meat in this form. The amount to be given depends largely upon the size of the birds, but a little every day to each one will make a great difference.
