

THE FIGHTERS DISAGREE

As to the Winner of the Go Between Rubin and Fitzsimmons.

CORBETT AND MCJOY LIKE THE OHIO PUG

But Terry McGovern Says the Corbettman Will Do the Trick With Ten Rounds—Fitz's Arm.

A peculiarity about the fight between Gus Rubin and Fitzsimmons scheduled for next Friday at the Astor is the interest it has created among other fighters as well as the public generally. This professional attention is far greater than that given any battle since the fall of 1900.

There is a general belief that the fight will be the best of the year. It brings together two men who were very much alike but at the same time very different. Rubin is a tall, thin, strong and game to the core but his style of fighting is interesting in that he is a boxer and a fighter in one.

McJoy, who is the cleverest of all the fighters, is a tall, thin, strong and game to the core but his style of fighting is interesting in that he is a boxer and a fighter in one.

McGovern does not share Corbett's and McGovern's opinion. He thinks that Rubin is a better man than he is given credit for. He thinks that Rubin is a better man than he is given credit for.
