SIMPLY REPEAL BAD LAWS.

The Indianapolis Star, a republican newspaper, has recently indulged the following:
"Intensely devoted as they are to the individualistic philosophy, the American people have been inclined to look upon government ownership as the last extremity of industrial and economic freedom. Especially when they contemplate the inefficient service official administration often gives and the political abuses to which bureaucracies and armies of government employes so readily lend themselves, does it seem better to bear the ills we have than to fly to others that we know not of. In this spirit an Indiana contemporary observes: 'Perhaps after Uncle Sam gets a postal savings bank established in every town he will then set up a printery, a lakeshop, a meat market and a grocery alongside of it. More than that, when it becomes generally known how poorly the postal department is managed few people will want to trust their savings with the institution any way.' But the American people will welcome government ownership, both local and national, the moment it develops that the great public utilities cannot be controlled in any other way. Gaynor's new and popular policies is municipal ownership of street car systems. If a combination of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph properties should be made so as to eliminate competition and defy legislative control, the proposal of government ownership would become a tenable and not at all horrifying thing. Whenever a public service corporation becomes a monopoly and controls legislation, local or national, it is inviting government ownership in the strongest possible way. It is better for the government to own the railroads and banks than for the banks and the railroads to own and run the government.

The result of government ownership would in all probability result in the trusts owning both the combinations and the government. An administration with all of the political machinery back of it would have an organization that could not be dislodged, and there would still be nothing in the way of selfish interests controlling. There are examples of this kind of government in existence, where the same man has been in absolute power for years and years, and is little less than dictator. The best way, to our mind, to handle the trust problem is to repeal such laws as give them special privileges, and the first law under this head is the high tariff. Get rid of that and much of the trouble has been solved.

THE FAVORITE WITH PROHIBITIONISTS.

We have no acquaintance with J. R. Brewster of Sherman. But when that gentleman tells us he has recently been on a business trip through Cooke, Denton, Tarrant, Hood, Erath, Hamilton, McLennan, Hill, Ellis, Dallas and Collin counties, with soundings as to political sentiment, "most of them saying they believe Cone Johnson to be the strongest temperance man in the race," we are prepared to believe him.

As matters now look, Cone Johnson will have the support of practically the whole prohibition vote. And that is perfectly natural, for he represents prohibition sentiment much better than does Judge Poindexter. Besides, the latter gentleman fell under suspicion when he became the favorite of a prominent politician known to be opposed to statewide prohibition. Cone Johnson is the man the anti-prohibitionists have got to beat or themselves be compelled to vote for a statewider next November.—Waco Times-Herald.

This has been one glorious Saturday, and the boys have talked politics some.

A big revival is to start in the Centenary Methodist church tomorrow morning. There are a number of people around here who should get on.

The boys' corn club is the liveliest wire in Anderson county today, and these boys are going to show the old heads how to farm in the up-to-date way.

The Herald is full of live business announcements today. Read them. Palestine merchants want your business, and are offering the goods and the prices.

It has been remarked and proven that war is hell, but when pork is quoted at double war time prices, it is shown that peace is not without its trials and tribulations.

If you favor statewide prohibition and want to see Texas rid of the saloon you should vote for Cone Johnson. He is the strength of the movement, and every vote scattered on other candidates weakens the cause to that extent. The anti want Colquitt if they can get him; if not, they will center on Poindexter.

The Knox family have slammed the parental door in the face of young Knox and his working girl bride. Too bad that young Knox did such a thing, to marry a girl that worked for a living. But how about the girl; if young Knox is like quite a good many in his class the girl will need to know how to work. If the girl is the right kind old Papa Knox and Mamma Knox should be proud of her and proud of their son for not being an idiotic snob.

CRITICISES STATE ROAD.

Engineer Parker Returns From a Trip of Inspection.

Austin, Texas, March 11.—Engineer Parker of the railroad commission has just returned from a tour of inspection of the physical condition of the state's railroad, between Rusk and Palestine. Parker finds the physical condition of the road to be far below that of the standard trunk lines of Texas, but its extent does not demand that it be equipped the same as the large lines. Engineer Parker could not go into details of the inspection, as he has not yet made his report to the commission.

He found a convict gang at work repairing the roadbed, but he did not see any convict working on the road as brakeman or in other positions, although it was reported that a convict had been working as fireman. Auditor Fitzgerald, who was detailed to examine the books and accounts, has not yet returned.
