SOME FREAKS OF CYCLONES

Tennessee Man Tells of Strange Pranks Credited to the Power of the Wind.

"Cyclones are not what they used to be in the old days," complained Col. A. M. Hughes of Columbia, Tenn., while talking in Washington of the recent storm that swept his home state.

"The cyclone which devastated parts of Tennessee a couple of weeks ago killed a large number of persons; just how many probably never will be known. But I haven't heard of any freaks perpetrated by the storm. Houses were blown down and people were crushed to death, but the storm seemed to spare nothing in its path.

"Ten years ago when the town of Columbia was visited by the cyclone which tore up a large part of that section of the state, about 16 lives were lost in and about the town. After the storm had subsided reports of its peculiar antics began to come in. On a near-by farm a house which had been constructed in a more than usually substantial manner was absolutely twisted and ground to pieces. The bricks were hammered apart and the timbers were twisted into kindling wood. Yet within 100 yards a flimsy shack which was used as a chicken house was left untouched. A man of any strength at all could have pushed it over with his shoulder.

"On another farm a large tree was found transfixed by a beam carried from a house.

"The timber had been shot through the tree as neatly as an arrow through a tin target. Why the beam was not shattered to splinters by the terrible impact no one could tell. But the perforated tree with the captive timber stood there to prove the story.

"The entrance of the government arsenal at Columbia was guarded by an immense stone pillar on either side. The storm confined its attention to these pillars. They were literally torn from the ground and broken to pieces. Cyclones of these days just go around killing people without doing a single interesting stunt."

New Way of Sleeping.

In a recent paper Dr. Johannes Menil-Hilty proposes to abandon the generally customary position of the body during sleep, and instead to place the feet higher than the head. He says that this habit is easily acquired by successively lowering and discarding the pillows and bolster, and finally by gradually raising the foot-end of the bed to eight inches. He points out in support of his theory, which he has tested by many years' personal experience, that by this position of the body during rest at night the circulation will be stimulated and improved, and better nutrition of both brain and nerves will thereby be attained. The author remarks that the objection to giving up the hitherto generally adopted manner of reposing during sleep which has always proved adequate and beneficial, for an unwonted and not yet generally tried position, may be met by the assertion that the still customary posture, with the head raised by one or two pillows and a bolster, has not yet been examined for its advantages and shortcomings, else it would readily have been perceived that it is not only irrational, but, in circumstances, also injurious, and, moreover, that it does not afford the same benefits as the position here advocated with the feet higher than the head.

Finished Work Here.

The insurance men, Messrs. Jones and Hanes, engaged in making inspections, etc., to formulate a report on which Palestine's insurance rate will be based, have finished their work, and go today to Corsicana, where they will engage in the same work. It will likely be some time before the Palestine rate will be arrived at.

TERRIBLE STRAIN RESULTED NOT AMISS

A Lenoir Lady, After Two Weeks Grinding Labor, Feels Better Than Ever.

Lenoir, N. C.—"I am not tired at all, and am stouter than I have ever been," writes Mrs. Kate Waters, of Lenoir, N. C., "although I have just finished a two weeks' wash. I lay my strength to Cardui, the woman's tonic. I have taken a lot of it and I can never praise it enough for what it has done for me. I can never thank you enough for the advice you gave me, to take Cardui, for since taking it I look so well and am stout as a mule."

You are urged to take Cardui, that gentle, vegetable tonic, for weak women. Its use will strengthen and build up your system, relieve or prevent headache, backache and the ailments of weak women.

It will surely help you, as it has helped thousands of others, in the past 50 years.

COULD NOT SEE THE FUTURE

Views of Statesmen of Earlier Days as to the West Are Simply Ludicrous.

It is hard for us of the present day to realize that there ever was a time when the size and importance of the United States was so little understood that grants of land were given to individuals deeding "all the land from Virginia west" and "all the lands west of the Mississippi river" between certain northern and southern boundaries, for small sums of money or in recognition of some service to the existing government.

And still later, not more than a century ago, two of the most productive sections of our great country were thought to be entirely worthless.

In referring to the Oregon country north of the Columbia river Daniel Webster wrote: "I believe Oregon to be a poor country, no way important to England and of little use to the United States."

On the same subject Senator Duffy said on the floor of the senate that he would not give a "pinch of snuff for the whole country" as an agricultural proposition, and with mock gravity concluded his arraignment with "I thank God for having placed the Rocky mountains there. At that time that mountain range was deemed impassable.

At the conclusion of the Mexican war when New Mexico and California, which tract includes what is now Arizona, were ceded to the United States as part of the indemnity, Daniel Webster referred to them as "a barren waste—a desert of plain and mountain; a region of savages and wild beasts; deserts of shifting sands and whirlwinds of dust, of cactus and prairie dogs.

"I have never heard of anything and I cannot conceive anything more ridiculous in itself, more absurd and more affrontive to all sober judgment than the cry that we are getting indemnity by the acquisition of New Mexico and California. I hold that they are not worth a dollar."

And all this pessimism was expressed by the big men of the nation but a few years ago. What would those men think of these states now?

Mrs. Charles Dickens.

In his account of a dinner at the Thackerays, Mr. Bigelow throws a curious light on the subject of the trouble between Charles Dickens and his wife. He describes the latter as "not a handsome woman, though stout, hearty and matronly; there was something a little doubtful about her eye, and I thought her endowed with a temper that might be very violent when roused, though not easily rousable. Mrs. Caulfield told me that a Miss Teman—I think that is the name—was the source of the difficulty between Mrs. Dickens and her husband. She played in private theatricals with Dickens, and he sent her a portrait in a brooch, which met with an accident requiring it to be sent to the jeweler's to be mended. The jeweler, noticing Mr. Dickens' initials, sent it to his house. Mrs. Dickens' sister, who had always been in love with him and was jealous of Miss Teman, told Mrs. Dickens of the brooch, and she mounted her husband with comb and brush. This, no doubt, was Mrs. Dickens' version in the main."—Bookman.

Lumber for Autos Expensive.

Southern poplar and ash enter into the construction of the best automobile bodies, and it is not very easy to buy the wood without paying an exorbitant price for it," said a manufacturer. "Why, poplar that should be about $75 a thousand is now about $125, the stuff having been pretty well cornered, and the makers who did not look out for themselves have to pay the difference.

"Anticipating a certain contract, I went south and bought 1,000,000 feet of it, and after that it did not make much difference whether I landed the job. I could have sold the lumber at about $50,000 profit and never touched it, but I am using it now.

"All kinds of lumber that enter into the automobile have advanced in price remarkably, and where the end is to be I cannot say."

"The Substance of Things Hoped For."

In the New York City Home for the Aged, a deaf old gentleman was making application preparatory to becoming an inmate. As is the usual procedure, he was questioned as to age, income, nationality and religion. He seemed to be able to get through with the first three questions, but when asked his religion he stared blankly at the superintendent.

The doctors and orderlies of the home went through a series of shouts and explanatory gestures, but without success. As a last resort one of the doctors dropped on his knees, and with hands upraised to heaven tried to illustrate what they meant by religion. A gleam of intelligence came over the good man's face, and he exclaimed, joyously, "Tammany Hall."—Success Magazine.

Parkkeeper—There's a pair of fine kids playing on the grass. Are they yours?

Lady—Yes.
Parkkeeper—Then you'll just give me your name, please mum. Nobody is allowed on the grass.

More Meant.

She—Don't you think it is silly in young people to sit holding hands?
He (absently)—Well, that depends altogether on whether they hold winning cards.

'Time's Flight Turned Backward' SAGE AND SULPHUR Made Her Look Twenty Years Younger

READ MRS. HERRICK'S SWORN STATEMENT

STATE OF NEW YORK } COUNTY OF MONROE } SS

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl, I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair which was the envy of my schoolmates, and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers. As I grew older, my hair commenced to come out, just a little at first, but gradually more and more, and then began to turn gray. I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy to try a bottle. My hair was quite thin and gray when I began using Sage and Sulphur, and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found that it was fast coming back to its natural condition, being thicker, darker and more glossy than it had been for a long time. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is now as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. It is now four years since I commenced using Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is still in splendid condition.

Sworn to before me this 14th day of July, 1902.

350 POUND MAN

Found to Be in Trim For the United States Navy.

(Herald Special.)

San Antonio, Texas, March 12.—When George T. Watterson, 22 years of age, six feet six inches tall and weighing 350 pounds net, put in appearance at the local naval recruiting station and asked to be enlisted for service in the United States navy, Frank R. Siegel, the officer in charge, nearly fainted. Reading of the regulations had no effect upon the husky one; he was going to enlist and surely the matter of surplus avoirdupois was not a serious matter, since he was physically fit every other way. About this latter assertion Siegel had his doubts, but since Watterson insisted that he be examined this office was proceeded with. To his surprise Siegel found that the man was physically perfect and an effort is now being made to see whether the weight limits cannot be stretched a little in order that Watterson may have the honor of being one of Uncle Sam's tars. Watterson thinks that with the advent of 32,000 ton battleships, men of his type will be needed to keep the things from being under-balled.

DR. TELLEZ'S FIND.

Believes He Has Located the Famous Park of Emperor Moctezuma.

(Herald Special.)

San Antonio, Texas, March 12.—According to a dispatch in the Mexico Daily Record, Dr. Guillermo Tellez, one of Mexico's best known archeologists, has discovered the famous botanical and pleasure garden of Moctezuma I, emperor of the Aztecs. Its site is located near the ancient town of Oaxtepec in Morelos, a location that seems to correspond with records of the garden in Aztec and ancient Spanish documents. Dr. Tellez made his discovery through the presence there of plants and trees not known in other parts of Mexico, which seem to be the survivors of the wonderful collection of exotic flora that had been gathered there by the Aztec monarchs. Steel bearing Aztec inscriptions were found nearby. The garden in ancient times was situated in the Indian kingdom of Oaxtepec, one of Moctezuma's vassal states.
