THEY ARE WATCHING US.

The Herald would like to publish just an even dozen opinions about the best method of improving our residence streets from people who have given the matter some thought. Somebody in Palestine has the solution of this problem thought out, or has a suggestion that will help to solve it. The Herald believes the work can be done at a nominal cost to the city, and at the same time provide good streets. If you write us make your suggestions brief and to the point, for it goes without saying that the streets cannot be built of hot air.—Palestine Herald.

This paragraph from the Herald was printed some time ago and has been preserved to see what effect it had upon Palestine citizens. Thus far contributions to the department of theories of road-making are not in evidence. Not only Palestine, but many other cities might have been gainers had a few practical men responded to the invitation.—Austin Statesman.

Now, brethren, since your observe that other people have their eyes on us, you will certainly come across and let's settle this question of better town streets. There are practical and economical ways to build these streets, ways that the city can afford, and some one here has the secret of the ways and means. We need the streets. We have been contending all along that gravel and sand on the clay would fix things up about right. If we are wrong, and you have a better plan to suggest, let's have it.

Get ready for the clean-up wagons next Wednesday. They will move your trash free of all cost if placed in convenient places.

Royal and the intersecting streets are being graded and improved. With a gravel and sand coating these streets could be made the real thing.

Today is St. Patrick Day, and many people have celebrated it by the wearing of the green. It is an Irish day, and the Irish are about as good people as the Lord ever made.

Houston is getting into the lime-light as a killing town. Several horrible crimes have been committed there in the past few weeks. Local self-government seems to need attention down that way.

Another slow rain has been falling during today, and the soil is getting the benefit. If a cold spell does not get us we will harvest a fruit and truck crop this year that will seem like old times in East Texas.

The Herald stands ready at all times to help boost in any work that means a better Palestine. There is a big future for this good old town, but it will take hustling and individual and community efforts to get the results.

One of the beauties of things lies in the very plain truth that this is a free country, and it follows that if Governor Campbell did not find it convenient or possible to go to the stock show at Fort Worth he did not have to go. The big noise made over his failure to be present is all out of place. The governor should be given credit for knowing his business and duty better than any other man on earth.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram's horse show number, printed yesterday, is a peach, and is one of the prettiest papers ever turned out in the south. The Star-Telegram is a live wire every day in the year, and is one of the prettiest papers in the country. Not only pretty, but it is ably conducted, and is a great asset for Fort Worth, and one that the business people thoroughly appreciate, judging by the patronage extended.

The Board of Trade will hold a regular meeting this evening, and some really important matters are to be discussed—some of them of actual vital importance to the future of the city. Every man who is interested in Palestine should be at the meeting. You, brother, cannot depend on your neighbor or the other fellow to take care of the public matters of your town; you owe it to your own best interest to help take care of public matters.

Waco goes right ahead on the Cotton Palace idea and is ready to begin active work. The people of the town took the stock in a very short time and raised a fund sufficient to guarantee a beautiful palace. Palestine should be working right ahead on the Fruit Palace idea and get things in shape to start actual work. There is need and room for a show of this kind in this section, recognized as the very heart of the fruit and truck belt of the state. We make the prediction here and now that if Palestine does not build such a palace and hold such a show some other East Texas town will.

BRUSHY CREEK.

Brushy Creek, Texas, March 15.—The merry song of the happy plow boy is extant in the land these days, and spring with all that the word implies is here—beautiful flowers springing from the earth on every hand, and the forest trees donning their foliage, while the fruit trees give every indication of an abundant fruit crop for the coming season. Farmers are manifesting commendable zeal in their preparation for the various crops; considerable corn has been planted, and the coming week will see the bulk of the crop planted. Frankston has planted heavily in tomatoes and potatoes. Tomato plants were quite an item about the time that they began to transplant into the cold frames. Too many depended on the other fellow for his plants, but the other fellow had barely enough for his own use.

Death visited our community last Tuesday, and took the beloved wife of Mr. A. J. Wylie. She had been sick for several days, but no one considered that there was any danger. A very serious case of pneumonia set in and did its dreaded work in a short time. Mrs. Wylie was a woman of such noble traits of character that none could help but admire her noble actions in all the trials of life. She met them all in a philosophical way. Mrs. Wylie was born near New York, in Henderson county, Texas, January 21, 1863. She was the daughter of Charles Hopper, a citizen of considerable note in his day. The writer knew him as a soldier, contending for the cause that was lost. For about one year he and the writer were associated as mess-mates, and I consider him as being one of the very few pure men that I have known in a long time. Mrs. Wylie was married to Mr. Wylie December 10, 1889. She leaves her husband and five children to mourn her untimely end. She had two children by a former marriage, Mrs. Lela Elrod and Mrs. Alice Miller, both living at Poyner, and of her three Wylie children, one, the eldest, Mamie, was married a short time ago to Mr. W. R. Jourdan of this community. Pearl, an unmarried daughter, and a son, Grover, are at home with their father. If her children can only emulate her pure life, they will do well. On Wednesday, late in the afternoon, when her body was returned to mother earth in that beautiful spot that the good judgment of the people of Poyner selected for the silent abode of the dead of this and the surrounding country for the coming years, hundreds of sorrowing relatives and friends were present to show how sadly they felt. Mrs. Wylie joined the Methodist church in her early life, and was identified with it to the end. The Rev. Richie of Larue officiated at the burial. All the sympathy that the human heart is capable of is extended by the writer to the bereaved husband and children of the departed, commending them to the care of Him who doeth all things well, looking forward to the day when the trumpet shall sound, and all the dead of earth and sea shall come forth.

During the electric storm that prevailed over this country on last Wednesday night, the telephone system at Frankston was damaged to a considerable extent, but I think that they are in running order again.

The general health of the community is good; there was a little brush of lagrippe, but that has about disappeared. The weather has been entirely too pretty for any one to be sick.

If a man approaches you these days and gives you an unusually hearty hand-shake, and just holds on, refusing to let go, and is very solicitous about your wife and children, do not be deceived; he does not give a hurrah on a hillside about your family or you, either, as to that matter—he is just a candidate, that's all. The woods are full of them.

I should like very much to see something from the old set of correspondents who were so much in evidence in the early days of the Herald. I cannot think they are all dead. Please, for "Auld Lang Syne," come again.

As events of note are rather shy, I will close for this time.

WHY SALVES FAIL TO CURE ECZEMA.

Scientists are now agreed that the eczema germs are lodged not in the outer skin or epidermis, but in the inner skin. Hence, a penetrating liquid is required, not an outward salve that clogs the pores.

We recommend to all eczema patients the standard prescription Oil of Wintergreen as compounded in liquid form known as D. D. D. Prescription. A trial bottle of this D. D. D. Prescription, at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. We have sold and recommended this remedy for years, and know of wonderful cures from its use. We recommend it to our patrons.
