FROM SOUTH AMERICA NOT ENEMY TO SOUTH

A Waxahachie Boy Writes of His Visit to City of Montevideo.

From a letter recently received by Mr. W. D. Ryburn from his son, Cliff Ryburn, a seaman on the United States battleship Brooklyn, the following extracts are taken:

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 15.—I have just returned from shore leave. Had a very nice time. Visited Mount Esquite, a very beautiful park. Most of the houses here are built of granite and marble, the latter being mostly used. While here I witnessed the return of the rebel army. They have been fighting since January 1, and have just surrendered. Their leader was killed in battle. They returned on the train bringing nothing with them but their saddles and bridles. About two hundred of the number were wounded and these were sent to the hospital. At the beginning of the rebellion the rebels numbered about 20,000 men and whipped the president's troops in every battle until their leader was killed. As he was paying all expenses of the war they were ready to quit fighting and surrender when he was dead.

Uruguay is the smallest of South American republics, and is about as large as the state of South Dakota. The seasons here are just opposite to our seasons. When it is spring here it is fall at home. The surface of the country is generally hilly and no where are there any mountains over 2000 feet high. Besides the Uruguay and Platte the only other river of importance is the Nigro in the east. There are numerous lakes and extensive swamps. During the winter months slight snows fall and windstorms are quite severe. Rains are abundant almost the entire year. The principal industry is stock raising, for which the country is admirably adapted. There are 15,000,000 cattle, 400,000 horses and 16,000,000 sheep in the pastures of the country.

Montevideo is the Paris of South America. The city is built upon a low ridge of rock which extends out into the Rio de la Platte. The streets all drain into the Rio, and every rain gives the city a thorough washing, hence the people enjoy good health. Montevideo, translated from the Spanish, means "I see the mountains." The bay is in the shape of a horse shoe and is six miles in circumference. The Brooklyn was compelled to anchor several miles out, as the river has been depositing mud in the bay at the rate of one inch a year. No ships drawing more than fifteen feet of water can get up near the city. The Silas theater, although built forty years ago, is a magnificent structure, covering nearly two acres of ground. It has a seating capacity of 30,000 and cost $300,000. Montevideo is noted for its culture and is a city of newspapers, libraries and schools. The National library contains 22,000 volumes and the museum has 33,000 objects. It has daily, weekly and monthly periodicals. Most of the newspapers are published in Spanish. Two are printed in English, one in Italian and one in French. The Pardo, is a beautiful park adorned with fountains, groves and flower gardens. C. W. RYBURN.

Local Telephone Lines.

Ed Maloney, son of Mr. J. M. Maloney, was a pleasant caller at this office yesterday. Mr. Maloney said the telephone company in which his father and John Harrison, Jr., were large stock holders owned about one hundred miles of wires in this county, nearly every section in the southern and eastern part of the county being connected. Mr. Maloney looks after the matter of keeping the different lines in repair.

General Fitzhugh Lee Gives His Opinion of President's Attitude.

General Fitzhugh Lee of Virginia was in Washington a few days ago and gave out the following interview with reference to the president's attitude toward the South:

"The papers report that the president of the United States," said General Lee, "at some time after his return from St. Louis, will visit Georgia, his mother's home, and later Texas. I am quite sure his reception will be most cordial and friendly."

"Human nature is the same almost everywhere. The Southern people, while impulsive, are warm-hearted and respond kindly to kind actions and kind words; but, like the people of the country generally, will growl if the hair is rubbed the wrong way. "Owing to the problems with which they are confronted, and which are unnecessary at this time to mention, they have voted almost solidly against Republican presidential candidates, and with almost equal unanimity, the negroes in their midst have voted the other way."

"I, for one, do not think the South will be found hostile to President Roosevelt's administration, but will assist in every measure tending to increase the general prosperity and promote the general welfare of the people. In other words, it will help him in every way, as the late great Ben Hill of Georgia said, 'in making this great Republic what our forefathers intended it should be, the glory of America and a blessing to humanity.'"

"The president is not an enemy to the South, and the South will not make war on the president. We know he speaks in exalted terms of the Confederate record of his maternal uncles, and we know, too, that he has said General Robert E. Lee was one of the greatest citizens and soldiers the world ever produced."

"I am one of those who are glad that he will visit the Southern section of this country, and glad that he will see the Southern people, and that the Southern people will assist him. A closer acquaintance will be of service to both and to the country."
