THE FENCIBLES.

They Returned from the Atlanta Drill Last Night.

They Got Third Place in the Interstate Drill and Should Properly Have Got First.

Capt. Ford Gives an Exhaustive Explanation of the Circumstances Connected with the Contest.

The Fencibles returned last night.

They arrived in Fort Worth at 3 o'clock.

Well, how did they do in Atlanta?

They carried off the third prize in the interstate drill, and should have got first.

The story is best told as Captain Ford related it to a GAZETTE man last night after he had refreshed himself with a supper and an artesian water bath.

"We left Fort Worth on the morning of Thursday, October 16, as you know. We had a boudoir car to ourselves, and the Cotton Belt provided everything essential to our comfort. We were in charge of Traveling Passenger Agent R. M. Carter, and I want to say that he left nothing undone that would make our trip enjoyable and pleasant. The boys of the company vote him a tiptop chaperone, and we all acknowledge ourselves under a debt of a gratitude to him.

"We passed through Memphis, and got to Nashville in time to see the big penisentiary fire, which, though not got up for our special benefit, interested us very much while it lasted.

"We reached Chattanooga on the morning of Saturday, Oct 18, and spent the day visiting Missionary Ridge, Lookout mountain and other points of interest in and near the city.

"It was in such cases as that that our chaperone, Mr. Carter, came to the front nobly.

"We were royally entertained by the citizens of Chattanooga, and everthing possible was done to make our stay in that place pleasant.

"At 6:30 Sunday morning we arrived at Atlanta. The city was pretty well crowded with visitors to the exposition; but we proceeded direct to the camp grounds, and at once pitched our tents in the grounds of the exposition.

"There were eight other companies on the grounds."

"The interstate drill was to have occurred at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning, October 22; and according to the written requirements of those in command of the drill each company was to have reported on the grounds ready for drill at its alloted time, rain or shine, dressed in full dress uniform.

"In the drawing for place the Fencibles drew first place.

"When 10 o'clock Wednesday morning came it was raining in torrents, but that was the hour allotted the Fencibles, and they were on hand ready for drill. But they received written orders to report again at 1 o'clock.

"At 1 o'clock we presented ourselves again and demanded that we be drilled, but again received orders for postponement.

"Eleven o'clock Thursday was the next hour set, and at that time we presented ourselves again and again demanded to be drilled, but were again refused, as it was still raining.

"On Friday morning the rain had subsided somewhat, but there was still a drizzle. The grounds were one sheet of water and mud, but the Fencibles were put through their drill.

"It was as miserable a field as any company ever had the misfortune to march upon.

"I went to the officers in command and requested that the drill be postponed till noon in order that the mud and water might pass away somewhat, but this was refused, and we were ordered to proceed.

We did so.

At 9:30 the drill began.

The mud was so deep and the ground so slippery I was almost impossible for the boys to march.

"But we made a splendid showing.

"We passed through an almost perfect inspection, received a perfect score on the manual and put up a creditable drill in the field movements.

"The score allowed us was 77½ out of a possible 100.

"The judges were Lieutenants Lawton of the Thirteenth Infantry, and McDonald of the Fourth Artillery, and Capt. Lyman Hall of the Grady cadets, at one time captain of one of the competing teams in the interstate contest.

"The Gate City Guards of Atlanta got the first prize with a score of eighty-five. The McCarthy Light Guards of Little Rock came in second.

"We drilled in the morning in the rain. The other companies came out after noon when the drizzle had ceased and the grounds had cleared off, to our evident disadvantage. Had we been allowed to drill on Wednesday morning as at first ordered, each company would have labored under the same disadvantages; but as it was we were for two days housed up in our tents without opportunity to drill, while the other companies practiced continually in their large armory, the courtesies of which they neglected to tender us.

"When Friday morning arrived and we were ordered to proceed with our drill, I requested that it be postponed until noon in order that the ground might dry off, but this was refused. We drilled in the rain and mud. The other compabies drilled on comparatively dry ground and without moisture in the air.

"Now I want to tell you how we lost.

"You observe we are only 7½ points behind the winner. Twelve and a half individual errors were charged against the company, and ten points were deducted from the score on account of two errors charged against the captain, as each error of the captain counts five points.

"One of the errors charged against me occurred this way: When the company was turned over to the judges for inspection, the command 'Inspection arm.' was not given by me. That was the charge, but the command in fact was given as can be proved by the affidavit of every member of the company; beside that, no army officer inspecting a company would proceed to inspect unless the captain had given such command, as otherwise the company would not be ready for inspection until after such command was given.

"The other error charged was that the boxes were not open for inspection. I stated to the judges at the time that they should not charge that error against me as it was the universal custom to direct the company commander to open boxes when such inspection was desired, and such was the instruction given to the officers of the Fencibles at the late San Antonio encampment, when one of the inspector-generals of small arms of the United States was present and gave the instructions. The judges at Atlanta directed the commanders of the other companies to open boxes.

"So it was wrong to charge such errors against the company.

"If we had not been charged these wrongful errors we would have been ten points better off, and would taken first prize.

"The Fencibles did not enter a competitive squad.

"But in the individual drill he put in four men out of the twenty competing. Our men were J. A. Flaherty, A. L. Abercrombie, L. Rosenfield and D. C. Ferguson.

"When the line had diminished to five men, three of them were Fencibles, one a Gate City Guard and the other a Sewanee cadet. The latter secured the prize.

"We should have won that prize too.

"When the command 'secure arms' was given the guard and cadet placed their thumbs under their gunslings; the Fencibles placed their thumbs on the top of the slings. The judges didn't drop out the cadet and guard for this although I pointed out that they had made a manifest error, as you will see here;" and Capt. Ford showed the reporter a copy of a revision of Upton's Tactics published by the secretary of war, which contains the following paragraph:

"As the gun sling is not mentioned in the manual of arms, it is fair to infer that it is supposed to be not in use; being used the thumb should be on the strap, not under."

"So you see how we were fixed at Atlanta," went on Capt. Ford.

"But we had a splendid time socially," he continued. "The boys were so taken up with Atlanta they did not want to come away. The reception given by Miss Howell, the sponsor of the company, was splendid, one of the finest things I ever saw; and the boys appreciated the favor."

What Capt. Ford says about the reception is borne out by the account given in the Atlanta Constitution of October 22, which says:

A more elegant and delightful entertainment was never given in Atlanta than that which gathered together a large number of guests at the handsome house of Capt. E. P. Howell last evening. The occasion was a reception tendered by Miss Effie Howell to the Fort Worth Fencibles, of which company she is the sponsor. Half the guests present were visiting military and the other half were of the young unmarried portion of society.

No home in Atlanta is more suitable for elaborate entertaining than Capt. Howell's, and on this occasion the beautiful grounds and handsome mansion appeared to the greatest advantage. A brilliant star, hung in the center of the archway of the long front verandah, showered a stream of light down the long avenue. The verandah was inclosed and the walls hung with smilax. From the ceilings swung many rich colored lamps and Japanese lanterns, and banks of glowing flowers and tropical plants added grace and richness to the scene.

In the brown room, with its effective carved cherry wood work, Miss Howell and her maids of honor, Miss Maude Barker, Miss Cornelia Jackson and Miss Adelene Adair, received their guests. The mantel was gracefully hung with delicate garlands of smilax. The grand piano was covered with a bed of brilliant flowers. An alcove in one corner, where the punch was served, had an arch twined with grape vines, rich in their treasures of purple fruit. The ceiling was adorned with alternating band- of white and blue ribbon radiating from the center chandeliers. In all the apartments there was some dainty white and blue decoration, these being the colors of the company.

The drawing-room was adorned with smilax and palms, and the elegant dining-room was most artistically and appropriately decorated. The table had for its center adornment stacked arms formed of blue and white flowers, while beautifully iced cakes, silver and cut-glass bowls of fruits and flowers formed the other decorations. Small tete-a-tete tables were placed here and there, each containing bowls of fruits and flowers in the center.

The archway of the bow window was hung with a spider's web of blue and white silk, and the buffets and mantel were adorned with flowers. All this lower floor and the porches were used for refreshments and for those who preferred promenading to dancing. On the third floor was the ball-room, the length and breadth of the whole mansion. This room was decorated with flags and bunting, the flag of the Fencibles being the most prominent.

THE GREAT VOLCANO.

The Last Days of Pompeii Drew Another Big Crowd.

The Exhibition Excelled all Previous Efforts in Some Particulars—A Startling Eruption—The Pyrotechnical Display.

The Last Days of Pompeii drew another large crowd last night, and the benches were almost as completely filled as on last Saturday night, when there was the largest attendance of the season, so far.

It was another chilly evening, but the visitors did not mind the condition of the weather.

In many respects the exhibition excelled any previous effort at Fort Worth. In fact the managers of the display appear to possess the facility of presenting something novel each evening and making successive exhibitions appear superior to those which preceded them.

The music was good. Professor Ault is the leader of the band, which previous to the beginning of the display renders a fine concert each evening, and during the exhibition renders appropriate music in good style.

There were new features in the way of specialties last night. A half-dozen ladder performers lent their talents to the interest of the occasion and right well did they succeed. The acts put in as part of the Roman sports, witnessed by the Pompeiian populace as part of the festival ceremonies are superior in every respect, and are seldom equaled in these parts as exhibitions of athletic skill. The gymnastic events last night were good, and the tight rope act and the bicycling.

A most pleasing feature of the entertainment is a beautiful and well performed waltz by a bevy of some twenty or more flower girls, dressed in pretty and rich costumes and given the best aid in the way of appearance by skilled application of colored lights. As they flit over the immense stage in the rendition of an elaborate and intricate dance to the strains of charming Nanon waltz, the scene is one long to be remembered.

The eruption of Vesuvius, which abruptly terminated the splendid performance last night, was an awful affair. It came with terrible suddenness. There was an ear-splitting explosion at the peak of Vesuvius, then explosions in all parts of the city. The temple of Isis shook as though by an earthquake, and amid the outpouring lava and exploding bombs the rich and gorgeous city is destroyed.

To-night will be an occasion of special interest at Pompeii. There will be still more specialty features and a representation in fireworks of the prettiest lady in Fort Worth will be given.

Who is the prettiest lady in Fort Worth?

USE POND'S EXTRACT FOR PILES

WHAT THE DOCTOR SAYS:

A PROMINENT NEW YORK PHYSICIAN SAYS:

"There is nothing better to relieve the PAIN and ITCHING, and CAUSE RETRACTION of PILES, than POND'S EXTRACT and POND'S EXTRACT OINTMENT. Either the Oil or the Ointment has the astringency and soothing effect required, and is a very useful preparation. In fact, I use them both whenever they are best suited to my patient."

WHAT THE PATIENT SAYS:

"For 40 years I have been an indescribable sufferer with the PILES. Every known remedy I have tried, all of which had a tendency to alleviate, not cure. First attacked with BLIND PILES, which annoyed me for years, BLEEDING PILES followed, which frequently confined me to the bed, leaving me unfit for business. Within a few days they have attacked me in full force, and that most excruciating of the hemorrhoid family, the ITCHING PILES, superseded both. Having become possessed of some POND'S EXTRACT, I applied it freely, undiluted. Had Heaven and Earth come together I would not have been more surprised. I never dreamed of a cure. Three times only have I resorted to POND'S EXTRACT, and the ITCHING PILES vanished as if by magic. I am fully convinced that it is the only known remedy in the wide world for the ITCHING PILES. My statement is unsolicited."—THOMAS S. MURPHY, Olmstedville, N. Y.
