GETTING READY FOR SANTA CLAUS.
Walker's 5 and 10 Cent Store has been officially declared the headquarters for Santa Claus for the coming holidays and Christmas and nothing is going to be left undone and no expense spared, to give the old gentleman a royal reception and a beautiful palace in which to reside during his stay in Bryan. In fact his quarters are going to be made so beautiful and attractive that he may decide to remain there permanently.
Mr. Walker has secured the services of Mr. E. E. Taylor from the wholesale house of Butler Bros. of Dallas, the largest wholesalers in Texas, and he will remain here until Christmas. Mr. Taylor is an expert window dresser and card writer and will do the beautifying and rearranging of the entire store from one end to the other and from the bottom to the top. New fixtures will be added and nothing left undone that will add to the attractiveness of this "Holiday Headquarters." See the window display for Friday's big specials. 291

A BUSY PLACE.
When the reporter called at the store of W. J. Coulter this morning on his rounds for news, he found it to be the busiest spot in Bryan. Mr. Coulter, with a large force of his help was busy unpacking trunks, suit cases and leather bags. They were all elegant, of the very latest style and would indeed be most suitable holiday gifts. If you are undecided about what to give your friend or relative for Christmas, make it a nice trunk or suit case. There is nothing they need more or which would be more highly appreciated. Coulter has a splendid line of both and when you go to buy, don't fail to look through his line. It is a pleasure for Coulter's sales-people to show you and answer any and all questions you may care to ask. 292-57

Thought He Was Mad.
The late Count de Lesseps was traveling on one occasion in a French railway train in a compartment with two commercial travelers.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said one of them, fancying that he belonged to their fraternity—"are you not a traveler?"

"Certainly I am," said the count. "We thought so! What is your line?" "Isthmuses."

"Wh-wh-what," asked the puzzled commercial—"what are they?" "I am introducing ship canals," said De Lesseps gravely.

The commercial travelers feared that they had fallen in with a lunatic and were making preparations to escape when the count handed them his card and put them at their ease.

The Architecture of Madeira.
We saw no suggestion of modern architecture or European innovation, no blot anywhere except a single motorcar. Without knowing anything on the subject I should say that the architecture of Madeira is a mixture of Spanish and Moorish, like that of Mexico, only it is better than anything in Mexico. From the ship the stucco, tile roofed city is flawless, and as we steam away and night comes down and lights break out and become a jeweled necklace along the water's edge our one regret is that we are leaving it all behind.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Outing Magazine.

The Easiest Way.
Dickson—Dobbins formerly opposed my views, but now he agrees with me in everything. Wickson—How do you account for it? Dickson—Don't know I'm not sure whether I convince him or only make him tired.

A CURIOUS FLY.

This Wasplike New Zealand Insect Feeds on Spiders.

New Zealand boasts of a fly that feeds on spiders.
This fly is black and wasplike and, like the wasp, lives in a nest of clay built in a crevice, preferably in the upper folds of heavy window curtains. This is one of the great annoyances of the tidy housekeeper in New Zealand. Try as she will, it is almost impossible for her to keep these flies from setting up their homes at the tops of her curtains.

These nests of clay are made up of a series of separate cells, usually from five to eight in number. When the nest is built the fly goes after spiders.

It has no trouble in conquering the spinners of silky webs. They succumb more easily than do the American flies which are so unfortunate as to get tangled in a spider's weaving.

The fly carries the spiders to its home and imprisons each one in a cell. Here the fly lays a single egg, and when the grub hatches out it eats the spider that has been provided for it. When its food is all gone the mother fly goes out and catches another spider, and she keeps this up until the young fly is old enough to catch spiders for itself.—New York Telegram.

Emerson's Courtesy.

When Mrs. Mary A. Livermore was a little girl she was monitor at the Hancock school in Boston, and it was her duty to answer the door. One rainy day the bell rang, and she found at the door a tall, thin man, with a dripping umbrella, who inquired for the principal. She was just at the boldness and disrespectful age, but there was something about this visitor which so impressed her that she led him in as politely as if he had been a prince, placed a chair for him by the fire, relieved him of his wet coat and umbrella and after she had started to leave the room came back to draw a fire screen between him and the blaze for fear he would find it too hot. She afterward expressed to her teacher some surprise at the unwonted civility she had felt impelled to show the stranger. He answered: "Ah, that was Ralph Waldo Emerson, and that is the effect he has upon everybody. He is so courteous himself that it calls out the latent courtesy in all others."
