"Gesundheit ist besser wie Krankheit"

Is an old German proverb which always holds good!
There is genuine health in OUR NEW

"TEXAS PRIDE"

beer, for there is no purer beer brewed and our motto is: "Not low cheap, but low good." Nothing but the Very Best Malt and the Finest Imported Hops, in connection with the purest and cleanest distilled water are used in the manufacture of same. It is aged in steel Enamelled Glass Tanks in a sterilized atmosphere; the malt is a food and the hops a tonic; consequently a health promoter.

We do not ask you to drink our beer on account of encouraging and sustaining a "Home" industry alone, but lay stress on the fact that we have absolutely a superior article.

Lay prejudice aside, try it, and be convinced!

WHISKY AND WEEVILS.

Dr. Hunter Says It is Foolish, and that Alcohol is Too Expensive.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 8.—Dr. W. B. Hunter, United States Entomologist, in charge of the boll weevil campaign in Texas, before leaving for Dallas with Dr. L. O. Howard, made the following interesting statement:

"The use of whiskey for the extermination of the boll weevil, of which mention has lately been made, is absolutely foolish, although alcohol, like numerous other things, will destroy the weevil. It is not practicable, because there are any number of cheaper things that are just as effective. What the department is in search of is not an exterminating agent, because we believe it impossible. We want something which will enable the farmer to raise a crop of cotton in spite of the ravages of the weevil. We desire to control the situation rather than kill the bug."

JESSUP, GA., BURNING.

No Means of Fighting the Fire, Which Has Already Consumed Blocks.

Jessup, Ga.: A destructive fire is raging in Jessup. It has destroyed the Strickland Hotel, where it started, two stores, the postoffice and is spreading rapidly.

The building in which the telephone exchange is located is on fire as this message, giving the information of the fire, is telephoned. It is sure to be destroyed and this is the last message that will leave the town.

There are no means of fighting the flames, which are sweeping on in their work of destruction.

Pay or Resign.

San Antonio, Tex.: A few weeks ago the police and fire commission of this city passed a resolution to the effect that all men employed in each department must pay their debts or resign. It has been learned by the commission that some men have disobeyed this order. All merchants who claim that bills are unpaid will be asked to come before the commission, and if the policemen have been negligent in the payment they will be discharged from the force. This applied to all bills except for liquor and other items that may be classed as extravagant.

Mexican Woman Stabbed.

San Antonio, Tex.: Last night at Converse, Tex., a Mexican woman, Narciso Gomez, was murderously assaulted. She was coming out of a store with a pocket book in her hand. A man demanded that she give up the purse. She refused, and he grabbed the purse, striking at her with a knife, inflicting a very dangerous wound just over the heart. As she turned to run she was struck in the back with the knife, the weapon remaining in the wound. Her assailant escaped.

Advised to Dissolve Union.

Lake Charles, La.: At a meeting last night of the Lake Charles Mill Workers' Union the president of the union, James Shevaller, advised the members to dissolve the union and apply for work at the mills as individuals. Formal action was not taken on the recommendation. It is understood that the mills will resume operations today if crews can be mustered who are not affiliated with the union.

Twenty Lives Lost in Mexican Floods.

City of Mexico: Twenty lives were lost in floods in Jalisco, Michoacan, caused by the torrential rains of the past forty-eight hours. Enormous damage to property has resulted.

NOT BRICKS AND MORTAR.

Streets Made Up of Human Beings and Light and Air.

Streets are commonly supposed to be made of bricks and mortar, but as a matter of fact these materials only go to supply the background. Streets are really made of human beings, and light and air—especially human beings. I remember prowling once at midnight in a Moorish town, and getting well lost for my pains. The deserted streets, which seemed to hate following a straight line for more than a couple of hundred feet, were picturesque enough with the moonlight breaking their darkness here and there; but they were really expressionless until, turning the corner, I nearly stumbled against a stalwart Moor who stood leaning motionless upon his musket. There was something about his dress and attitude that seemed almost too good to be true; for a moment he wore the air of a theatrical episode, as though he had been deliberately "staged" there to give my western eyes a new sensation. But how the pure human nature of him transformed the dreary street! To a lost traveler he changed the whole face of things in an instant. A picture of that street without him would have been nothing more than a conventional picture of light and shade. My turbaned sentinel filled it with vitality and interest. The point needs no emphasis, yet it is interesting to consider how one is perpetually coming back to it, disregarding of that background of which we are all inclined, and not unreasonably inclined, to make so much.

I suppose no one was ever more disposed than was Balzac to get all that could be got out of the background. His novels are rich with passages—some of them so long that they fill a good part of the chapter—in which the characters of streets are established with a profound feeling for the individuality of inanimate things.—Scribner's.

Mr. Timid—O—pardon me, Miss Maudie, but at what age do you think women should marry?

"What are you getting so excited for? I haven't said anything to provoke you!"
"You said that I'm the biggest swindler that you know in the business!"
"Well, what of that? I was thinking you and I ought to go into partnership."

Childhood's Toll to Mammon.

Conditions in the Large Cities a Disgrace to America.

When women's wrappers are paid for at the rate of 49 cents a dozen, and silk waists at eight cents each, it is easy to understand why even the help of tiny children must be called upon to earn a pittance for the makers. If the children can do no more than thread needles or pull out bastings their assistance is precious; if they are intelligent enough to sew on buttons, or make button-holes, their help is more precious still. As soon as baby fingers can move intelligently they play an increasingly important part in the labor of the household.

It seems incredible, I know, to talk of an infant three years old working, and some may regard the statement that such little ones do work as a sensational exaggeration. But it is literally true, as is proved by the testimony of witnesses of unimpeachable character. A baby three years old can straighten out tobacco leaves or stick the stamens of artificial flowers through the petals. A child of four can put the covers on paper boxes, or even help to paste them. A child from four to six years of age can pull out bastings and sew on buttons. A child of eight can make artificial flowers almost as well as an adult, and can make paper bags just as well, and almost as quickly. Many a girl from eight to twelve years old can finish boys' "knee-pants" as well as her mother. In our greatest and richest city babies who should be in the kindergartens have been compelled to work in such occupations as I have described, and others of a like nature.—Woman's Home Companion.

Difficult Cotton to Weave.

Weaving cotton in Africa is slow and difficult work. A skilled workman can weave about three yards a day.

LOST AND FOUND—A STORY WITH A MORAL.

Opportunity knocked once at a man's door.
"Come in," said the man. "Who are you and what do you want?"
"I am Opportunity," replied the visitor.
"I'm sorry," said the man; "but this is my busy day. Can't you drop in tomorrow?"
Some days later Opportunity, happening in the vicinity again, met Failure.

"Hello!" cried Failure. "Where are you going?"
"I really don't know," replied Opportunity. "I was to call on a man, but I guess I'm lost."
"Then I guess I'm found!" shouted Failure; and he hurried to the man and dwelt with him ever after.—Judge.
