CAPTAIN JOE SHELY.

A Successful Career as an Officer and Detective.

The Terror to Stage Robbers. Marsh Polk's Money Powerless.

There is no public employment so hazardous, and in many instances so thankless, as that of an officer of the law. Continually exposed to danger of life and limb, no pension or other public acknowledgement is offered in case of wounds or death received in the performance of duty and the protection of life and property. Many an officer performs duties, that were the sum amount of risk taken in military service, it would inscribe his name on the immortal tablets of history.

The subject of this sketch, although now nominally in military service, still he is really nothing more than a civil officer acting in the capacity of commanding a posse comitatus, with a roving commission. Joe Shely was born in Calhoun county, Texas, November 7, 1854, and is consequently only in his thirty-first year. His father was an American and his mother a Mexican, consequently he speaks both languages with equal fluency, and to this fact he can credit much of his success as a detective. At the age of three months his parents moved to Bexar county, and settled on a farm about twelve miles south of San Antonio. It was here that Joe spent his boyhood and youthful days, early learning the art of the lasso, and other accomplishments of a western stockman. His natural independent and fearless disposition led him into the cattle business, at a time when men of his disposition were in demand. Before he reached his majority he had often been put in charge of large gangs of men to gather up stock, and make several trips to Kansas in charge of large herds.

For many years the depredations among the cattle and horses were continual in spite of all the efforts of the constituted legal authorities of the counties. It seemed to be impossible for thieves to be detected, apprehended and punished. This state of things led to the organization of the Bexar County Stock Protective association, and the employment of private officers, who were to devote their entire time and energy to bringing thieves to justice and making property more secure. At the age of 23 Joe Shely was chosen as such officer and clothed with legal authority. It would be utterly impossible to give a full account of the service rendered. He soon became a terror to evildoers. The haunts of thieves were broken up, and men were indicted, arrested and sent to the penitentiary who heretofore had almost been above suspicion. It was here that Joe developed that wonderful detective ability that has made him a name among the officers of the law. His qualifications have proved of the higher order, which is in not only detecting criminals, but in being able to get at the details of the crime, and in securing their conviction.

In a couple of years he so far broke up the organized system of stock stealing in this county as to make his services no further necessary to the association, and in fact the necessity for the association itself disappeared with the breaking up of the thieves, and the association was dissolved. Shely then entered the service of the county as Criminal Deputy Sheriff, under T. P. McCall. He continued his work of prosecuting the desperate cattle and horse thieves, and endangered his life a thousand times, receiving a severe wound from the assassin's knife, and a slight wound from a pistol shot, while he has miraculously escaped innumerable bullets deliberately aimed at him.

While a deputy sheriff the country was startled by a series of daring and bold stage robberies. Their very audacity seemed to paralyze the arm of the United States authorities. It soon became apparent that they were committed by an organized band of bold and desperate men, the number of whom no one knew.

The newspaper head lines, "The long and short man again." Another stage full of passengers robbed," etc., were almost stereotyped. In a desperate mood the Special Postal Agent of Texas, Amos P. Foster decided to employ a special detective, and selected Joe Shely among the thousands of efficient officers in the State. Soon the reading public was electrified by the announcement that three of the robbers had been arrested. They were Bob Logan, Bill Humphries and Bob Rowley. But still stages were being continually stopped and mail and passengers robbed. After a short time another and larger batch of arrests were made, and the gang was safely behind the bars, including their leader, Tom Moody, who for seven years had robbed more stores and stages than any man in the west. Everyone of the gang were in the hands of the officers except Tom Criswell, the famous "short man," Tom Moody being the "long man." Criswell had made good his escape from the State, and has not again been heard from.

Of these stage robber, Bob Logan was sentenced to 10 years; Bob Rawly, 10 years, but died in the Bexar county jail; Tom Moody for life; Neal Wilkerson for life; William Pettit for life; Julius Starke for 10 years; and John Thunan, 10 years, and Bill Humphries had his case dismissed for turning State's evidence.

Soon again the stage was robbed at Dead Man's Hole, 35 miles north of Laredo, and then also just north of Oakville. Speedily thereafter, Tom Drake, Bob Doughty and J. P. Stonebraker were arrested and all the plunder taken from the passengers was recovered. Tom Drake, the planner of the jobs, but not actually present, turned State's evidence and had his case dismissed, but was afterwards shot down in the public plaza of San Diego, unmourned, and his slayer not even arrested. Bob Doughty was sentenced to seven years, and Stonebraker to ten.

The desperate gang of robbers had been arrested, and their prompt punishment acted as a wholesome warning to other, and the need of a special detective disappeared. It would be impossible to give even a faint outline of the amount of work performed to bring about this desirable state of affairs The hundreds of miles of lonely riding over plains, valleys and mountains, in rain, and under the scorching sun in daylight and in darkness, associating with desperate men, and a thousand exposures to death. But the work was finished and well done; the country was rid of the most perfect organization of desperadoes that ever infested it. Joe Shely's services were no more needed as special detective of the postal department, but his services were sought in another direction. He was appointed as Mounted Inspector of the Custom house at Laredo, but still retained his commission as Special Deputy United States Marshal, under the lamented Hal L. Gosling.

In this capacity he continued his efficient services, and made the most famous arrest of the many hundreds he has made. It was that of Marsh Polk, the defaulting State Treasurer of Tennessee. Polk had succeeded in eluding and bribing the hundreds of detectives put upon his track, until he had reached the sight of the blue hills of Mexico and liberty. His heart began beating high with hope, and long breaths of relief escaped him as he left the train at Webb station, from where he intended to cross the Rio Grande above Laredo. But the wires had carried the news to Joe Shely, who was instantly in the saddle, and like a bloodhound, was quickly on the trail. Polk had an experienced guide and was using all precautions against capture, but he had a keener pursuer after him, and was found hiding in the chaparral. Imagine the chagrin of the fleeing Treasurer. He, in a desperate mood, offered his captor all the money he had about his person, amounting to over $9,000, but Joe Shely was not a bribe taker, but a thief taker, and the aristocratic criminal was returned to Tennessee, tried and convicted.

May 4, 1883, Captain Lee Hall having resigned the command of the famous company of rangers organized and successfully commanded by the gallant Captain McNally, it was offered to Joe Shely, with rank of First Lieutenant. His services as a ranger has been as highly satisfactory as those in his former capacities. He has been promoted to a Captaincy, and the last annual report of the Adjutant General of Texas shows that the number of arrests made by Captain Joe Shely's company exceed those of the entire balance of the battalion of five companies.

There are probably few instances in history where in a short career of eight years so much of actual services have been rendered of a dangerous and exciting nature as that of Captain Shely; and very naturally he has enemies, many of whom are powerful and influential, but still he has friends who also gratefully remember his signal services.

In appearance Captain Shely is modest and inassuming. He is a little above average height, standing about 6 feet, and well developed, weighing about 190 pounds. He has black hair and eyes, wears a heavy black moustache, and shows his Mexican blood in his bronze cheeks, tinged with a deep crimson. His voice is deep and musical, and his bearing military, without a swagger, but would attract attention among ten thousand as the embodiment of physical strength and endurance. In conversation he is affable and polite, and his frank, open countenance is the last you would imagine to belong to a successful detective and thief taker. Here, among those who have known him from childhood, he is simply Joe, but in time to come he will furnish excellent ground work for many a thrilling tale of border life.

On the 15th of June Captain Shely tendered his resignation to the Governor, who, after an urgent remonstrance accepted the same, and thus this efficient officer returned to the walks of private life. Since his retirement he met Senator E. F. Hall in a variety theater in Laredo where a shooting affray occurred, brought on by an old feud, in which Captain Shely was wounded in the shoulder. The grand jury of Webb county refused to indict either of the parties.

Chicken Mollie Again—More Fights, Drunks, Etc.

James Bland, beating and striking Annie Taylor, continued in order to produce the woman, who is in hiding.

John Doyle, drunk and disorderly. He was riding up and down Avenue C, and rode on the sidewalk in front of some ladies. Fined $5.

John Ryan, being disorderly. He was drunk, and was trying to carry off some clothing out of a store. He was fined $5.

L. Franklin, violating hack ordinance, continued.

Mary Cannon, "Chicken Mollie," drunk. She said it was a dam lie. The policeman who drink whiskey with her, she said, made her drink it, and she didn't want it. The Recorder said he would let her off with $5, as the officer had made her drink.

Jesse Evans, beating and striking, transferred to Justice's court.

Gregorio Lugo, Jim Regan, John McClosky, Epifanio Munoz, drunk, each fined $5.

AN ORDINANCE

To Prevent the Running of Railroad Cars Within the City Limits, Unless the Same be Attached to a Locomotive Engine.

Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of San Antonio:

Section 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person to run any railroad car over the main track of any railroad within the limits of the City of San Antonio, unless the said railroad car be attached to and attended by a locomotive engine.

Sec. 2. Any person found guilty of a violation of the provisions of this ordinance, shall, upon conviction before the Recorder, be fined in any sum not less than five, and not exceeding two hundred dollars.

Attest: E. P. CLAYDON, City Clerk.

Unhappy Nellie Grant.

Algernon Sartoris, the husband of Nellie Grant, has been exceedingly brutal in his treatment of her, and she does not want to live with him. The only reason why her separation has not been completed is because she has been unable so far to obtain possession of her three children. If Mrs. Sartoris gets possession of them she will probably after the mourning in the Grant family ends, bring a suit for divorce from the brutal, unappreciative creature she married. This marriage was the regret of Grant's life.

ATLANTA, GA., Oct. 15.—The legislature adjourned to day after a summer's session of 103 days. The most important bill passed was a general option law under which many temperance elections will be held in various counties.

Funeral Sermon Over the Body of Cardinal McCloskey.

The Republican Victory in Ohio Gaining—Forsker's Views—Fitz Hugh Lee's Chances in Virginia.

NEW YORK, October 15.—The sermon at the funeral of Cardinal McCloskey, this morning, was preached by Archbishop Gibbons, of Baltimore. The text of the sermon was Ecclesiastics, 3. "These words, spoken originally of Aaron," said the speaker, "may be fittingly applied to the great high priest whose mortal remains now lie before you. He was also chosen out of all men to fill the highest ecclesiastical position in this nation. That he might teach Jacob his testimonies and give light to Israel in his law. The glorious ornaments of a pontiff, to which the sacred text referred, had a twofold signification. They symbolized in the eyes of the people his spiritual dignity and authority. To the pontiff himself they represented the interior ornaments of virtue with which he should be adorned, and without which the most precious ornaments lose their lustre. These scarlet robes of the Cardinal reminded you of the exalted dignity to which he was raised. They reminded himself of the garment of immortal love won by his divine martyr and crimsoned with his precious blood and that he should be ready if necessary to lay down his life for the faith. The Cardinal's death had brought sorrow to the universal church as well as the church of America and New York. It has filled with grief the great heart of the sovereign pontiff and the college of cardinals, of which he was an illustrious and distinguished member. It has fallen heavily on you, venerable brethren of the clergy, and the sadness depicted on your countenances is the expression of grief which fills your hearts. Nor was this grief confined to those who were of the household of the faith. It extended to all classes and creeds of the community. The great heart of New York had mourned him as well became their Empire City, lamenting the death of one of its most illustrious and honored citizens. Neither worldly power or place could command such heartfelt and universal respect as been paid to the remains of your reverend prelate. He had won the hearts of the people. The Christian prelate was always a man of mark, the centre of observation to the eyes of the world. To the eye of faith the Bishop or priest is above the angels, because he exercises powers not given to angels. The Bishop is the ambassador of God, appointed to vindicate His honor and proclaim His name among the nations of the earth. It is esteemed a great privilege for a citizen to represent this great republic in the courts of Europe. How much greater the prerogative to represent the court of heaven among the nations of the world. The life of a Cardinal has never been written and never can be, and this is true of every Catholic prelate of America. The biographer might recount the good works and deeds he had done, but he can know nothing of his private and inner life, which is hidden with Christ in God. That was manifest to God and the recording angel only. People came to him with their cares and troubles and for counsel in doubt, for spiritual and even temporal assistance. Were a Bishop's real life in its outward and inward fullness published, it would be more interesting than a novel. If this was true of the humblest prelate in the land, with how much greater force may it be applied to one occupying the eminent position of your beloved Cardinal." The Archbishop then briefly sketched the Cardinal's life, and touched upon a few salient features in his long and eventful career.

COLUMBUS, October 15.—The official returns from nearly all the precincts canvassed since Tuesday night, make Forsker's plurality touch 21,000, with the result of the ticket likely to exceed that. There are, too, 23,000 votes for prohibitionists and 3000 for greenbackers in a total vote of over 700,000. The Legislature is Republican on a joint ballot, without the 14 members from Hamilton county, by at least five, and probably nine, but without Hamilton county the Senate would likely have one Democratic majority. With Hamilton county, the Republicans would have a majority of 33 on joint ballot, and a working majority in each branch.

CINCINNATI, October 15.—There can be no absolute certainty about the result of Tuesday's election in Hamilton county until the official count is made. The vote in two precincts of the Nineteenth ward, whose counting was unfinished last night, has now been counted and the result for Governor, with one county precinct missing, which in 1884 gave it Republican majority, stands thus: Hoadley 33,667, Forsker 33,362, Leonard 1020. Hoadley's plurality 305. Returns are far from complete on the Legislative ticket. The Times-Star estimates that the average vote on Republican members of the Legislature exceeds Forsker's vote by 1015. If that rate is maintained it would elect the Republican delegation, except Robert Harlan. Nothing can determine this contingency except the official count. Figures from the State, exclusive of Hamilton county, indicate a plurality of from 10,000 to 30,000 for Forsker.

CINCINNATI, October 15.—Governor-Elect Judge Forsker, being asked what he regarded as the leading motives that had led to the result in Ohio, said:

1. The Republicans regarded it as important that a decisive expression should be given at the first election after the beginning of a Democratic National administration.

2. A determination to give an expression in favor of free ballot and a fair count in all our elections.

3. Distrust concerning the free trade tendencies of the Democratic party, coupled with a recognition of the necessity of maintaining the Republican ascendency in the United States senate.

4. Disgust with the Democratic State administration in Ohio, notably the election of the last Senator and extravagance of the last Legislature.

5. A wish to have the liquor traffic regulated and taxed as a practical question of dealing with the subject, and dissatisfaction with the Democratic license which is impracticable.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 15.—The Democratic committee met here to-day, and was in session for several hours, hearing reports from different sections of the state. The committeemen assert that the election of General Fitzhugh Lee for governor is an assured fact, and they will have a majority in both branches of the General Assembly. Representatives from a number of doubtful counties were present to ask the committee for help, and were promised all the assistance that the committee could afford.
