

BIG CROWD LOST NEAR RICHMOND

Bunch Rescues Itself
Before Daylight.

The Council and Other Interesting News.

RICHMOND, Jan. 8.—To have the novel experience of being lost within a few miles of their own homes, where they had been born and raised, is what happened to a part of the Daisy Dean Dramatic Club of this place on their return trip home from their engagement in Preston Tuesday night. Lewiston was at last reached and passed and when they came to the railroad track near the sugar factory, after much discussing and talking they decided they were at or near Eornish, and accordingly they turned around and went back the road they came. They were completely lost. Lewiston was again reached and one of the party alighted from a sleigh and after much knocking, succeeded in awaking the inmates of a certain house and inquired of them the way to Richmond. The reply came "go east," but which way was east? The party entirely lost their bearings and not having a compass they had to again enquire which way was east. They got the information and the road, too, and reached home at last late Wednesday morning. The company intends, but not definitely to play in Clarkston Friday night, and it has been suggested that they have a map of the country between Richmond and Clarkston drawn up showing the roads, houses, fences, rocks and other landmarks, that the experiences of Tuesday night will not be repeated.

The City Council.

The city council held a short session Monday night. The various new committees were appointed. The members of the new council got acquainted with each other and transacted a little business. Fred Christensen was again given the street supervisorship and office of city water-master. The appointing of a marshal and justice of peace was laid over until another meeting.

A very pretty wedding reception was given Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Gardner, in honor of her daughter Tillie, who was married the same evening by her uncle, Alfred Gardner. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wood of Lanark tucked their two little children in bed, and went to enjoy the dance at the school house about a mile distant on New Years night. The children woke up and became frightened on finding their parents absent, opened the door and ran across the road in their night clothes and bare feet. When found they were nearly frozen to death, and it is feared that one of them will have one of its feet amputated. —Paris Post.

CENTRAL STATION WENT TO LEHI

Officials Decided Matter Last Saturday.

Particulars About Establishment of same.

According to THE REPUBLICAN's prediction Saturday morning, the A. C. trustees, with the State Land Board, selected Lehi, Utah county, as the most desirable location for the central experiment station. It took two ballots to decide and these were as follows.

Spanish Fork 3, Provo 5, Lehi 3, Farmington 2.

The second ballot stood: Lehi 7, Provo 5, Farmington 1.

The line-up in the voting was as follows if we have been informed correctly, and we doubt it not.

For Lehi—W. S. McCornick, George C. Whitmore, E. R. Owen, J. A. McAllister, W. H. Thain, Thomas Smart, Dr. P. A. Yoder.

For Provo—William Spry, John McGrey Dixon, W. D. Candland, Mrs. Susa Young Gates, Lorenzo Stohl.

For Farmington—H. N. Hayes.

The supporters of Lehi, as shown by the above, include all the members of the board of trustees of the Agricultural college with exceptions two and with the vote of Dr. Yoder added. The only member of the land board shown to have voted against Provo is Mr. Hayes who appears as a supporter of Farmington. He is the only Democrat on the land board.

This Settles The Contest.

Saturday's action settles a contest that had been pending before the commission for more than six months. Originally Weber, Davis, Salt Lake and Utah counties were in the field. Committees of the commission visited the sites offered in all the counties, and at length eliminated all but Davis and Utah. The fight between the two counties was warm. Both counties offered several good sites. The commission decided that the Farmington site was the most suitable one in Davis county. Utah county kept three sites in the field, one at Provo, one at Spanish Fork and one at Lehi.

Arguments in favor of the Farmington site were that it offered all that could be desired in the way of location, soil conditions and water supply, and that Davis county had never received a state institution, while Utah county had one of the leading institutions.

It is likely the Agricultural college trustees would have been as well satisfied with the Farmington site, but a compromise was found necessary in order to defeat Provo.

Yoder to Be in Charge.

Control of the matter passes now to Dr. P. A. Yoder, director of the state experiment station at Logan. Utah county donates the site to the state. Dr. Yoder will select sixty acres of land about midway between Lehi and American Fork. The exact description of the site will not be known until Dr. Yoder makes his selection. The site will contain loam, clay, gravel and sand in distinct areas, and will have one second-foot of water available on the ground. This provision insures the farm against loss of irrigation water through evaporation and makes it certain that the full second-foot will be available for the use of the farm at all times.

An appropriation of $8,000 is available for the establishment of the new station. Experiments will be conducted with orchard, garden and field crops to determine the most profitable kinds, the best varieties of each kind, the best cultural methods, the proper use of irrigation water, the possibility of adapting imported varieties to Utah conditions, preparation of products for market, preservation by drying, canning, etc. At least one report on experiments must be made annually, and 6000 copies of it will be distributed free of charge to interested citizens of the state.

The experiments will be conducted under the direction of Dr. Yoder.
