BIG BATTLESHIP AND FIGHTING ADMIRAL.

A Splendid Object Lesson to Japan.

When the Republic, yesterday, once more claimed the honor of defeating the greatest of the great warships and the unfolding of the most brilliant naval victory of the century, every city and every city that is interested in the welfare and the strength of the nation, was filled with a sense of joyful pride. And there was good reason, for the Republic, yesterday, demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt, what has long been known, that the Republic stands at the head of the nations as an industrial and military power.

The Republic is not only the most powerful nation in the world, but it is also the most self-reliant. The Republic stands alone, with an army of its own, and the strength of its own resources, and it is not necessary to rely on other nations to carry on its business.

CHOOSING A VOCATION.

A Comparison of the Thirty Nine in Different Occupations.

Washington, D.C., Thursday, February 1, 1907. The occupation of the Republic between the thirty-nine states of the Union has been completed. We have had a great number of occupations for different states, and each state is required to keep a certain number of occupations for the benefit of the nation.

A comparison of the good works, many of which are not found in other states, has been made, and it has been found that the Republic has been the leader in all the occupations.

The Republic is not only the most powerful nation in the world, but it is also the most self-reliant. The Republic stands alone, with an army of its own, and the strength of its own resources, and it is not necessary to rely on other nations to carry on its business.

A HAND-TO-HAND CONFLICT.

How the Sioux and the Pawnee Forced Each Other to Commit Suicide.

BY OUR MAN.

San Francisco, July 24, 1877. The Sioux and the Pawnee, in a fit of wild excitement, yesterday, forced each other to commit suicide.
