The officials of both navy and state departments have little apprehension of ill-treatment to Americans in either Greece or Turkey, which is regarded as being the only one for the time being. It is now possible, at a later stage in the war, in the event that the Turks are defeated, there may be rioting at Constantinople and in the other Turkish cities, but that is not feared at present...

It has been suggested that the president probably will be called upon to issue a proclamation of neutrality, that war has begun between Turkey and Greece. The officials have looked into the precedents in such cases and have concluded that the president's present do not require the issue of a notice. The purpose of a neutrality proclamation is to guard American citizens against the consequences of a violation of the neutrality imposed upon nations not party to a war...

Minister to Greece Snowden Is Not at All Sanguine. Philadelphia, April 19.—Ex-Minister to Greece Snowden said today that he had recently received the following report from the Greek minister at Washington: "The Greek minister at Washington is not at all sanguine regarding the attitude assumed by that monarch."

There never was so ill an opportunity for the United States to have a conflict with Turkey. Up to two or three years ago an advance of the Greek army into Thessaly would have meant a great victory for the Greeks. Bulgaria, Serbia and Macedonia, and the overpowering of the Turks, for Roumania alone has a larger and better equipped army than the Greeks. "Now, however, the situation is very different. Roumania has practically established an allegiance to Germany by having a German garrison upon her throne. Bulgaria has almost become a Russian province, and Serbia's king is the son of a daughter of a Russian prince. The United States is in a position to see that the people of these countries act contrary to the influence of their leaders, there is not likely to be any combination against Turkey."

It Is Not Confirmed. London, April 19.—A dispatch to the Times from Eleassona says that fighting began at Janina on Sunday morning. There is no confirmation of the rumor that 12,000 Turks have occupied the fort at Topogepada, on the road from Arta to Janina.

Suspense Is Extreme. London, April 19.—An Athens dispatch to the Chronicle dated midnight says: General Smolowitz, in command of the Greek army, has been ousted from Edhonn Pasha toward Damascus. A Massacre Feared. Athens, April 19.—Midnight—the Greeks have occupied several strategic positions around Damascus, including Viglia. Three thousand armed peasants have joined the troops. It is alleged that 2,000 Turks attacked Revino.

It is feared that a massacre has taken place at Preveza during the bombardment. St. Petersburg, April 19.—Referring to the formation of an alliance between Bulgaria, Serbia and Montenegro, it is semi-officially pointed out today that the league being formed is not only for the purpose of opposing the Turkish empire, but also for the purpose of opposing the Balkan peninsula. Therefore, it is added, the plan was to force any support in the present conflict from the countries indicated, and moreover, their respective ministers have positively assured Russia that their governments will maintain strict neutrality.

The Griffin divorce case with its sensational suggestion of bribery in connection with the awarding of the street sprinkling contract was the only subject discussed in municipal circles yesterday. The matter is being considered in the expediency of ordering the international fleets to leave Greece and the Dardanelles, to wait the fighting with a view to involving it in a general intervention.

Spring Problem.—The here, that embarrassing season of Russia is being met by the bicycle suit with reliable reason. Which bicycle suit is worse. —Washington Star.

Cleveland Leader.—"So you think Durkin is madly in love with his wife, do you?" "No doubt of it. I saw him cleaning his boots after they had got back from their spin. You're kidding, but I'm serious."

Our contemporary doesn't state what bicycle suit is better. It says that if a plump and speedy wheelman, known as the "spicy" name, should knock down a fat fellow, known as the "fat" name, and after riding over his body, unconsciously sit down on him as he lies prostrate, he would be "done" and wrecked spokes in his ribs.

It is said that some of the big millers and bakers in the west have found a way to adulterate wheat by a mixture of cornmeal.

When the firing slackened last night, the men slipped themselves down where they stood on the ground. The Turkish commander-in-chief immediately ordered his army to rest.

More details come in, it becomes more and more apparent that the Greek advance was of the most stubborn and savage character. The Turks fought like lions, and the Greeks resisted in the spirit of their ancestors.

Most inexplicably fast in connection with the Greek advance, the Greeks, in a comparatively small number of killed, all the Turkish soldiers were killed. This, the Turkish commander-in-chief says, is as widely with their rifles at Milosna. The Turkish commander-in-chief says that the fighting consisted of an artillery duel between the rival batteries on each side of the river, and that the fighting continued in the afternoon. There they fired only one out of five shots with any effect, and their batteries were soon silenced by the Greeks whose marksmanship was very much superior. The Turkish losses at Arta are believed to have been very heavy. On the Greek side there was not a man killed.

Later, a m. General Smolowitz, commander of war, is in command of 4,000 Greek troops, not far from Tyrnavo, northwest of Larissa, at a distance of 10 miles. Edhonn Pasha, closely pressed, was nearly taken prisoner. His plan was to force the pass of Revent to enter the plain of Larissa, and to cut off the retreat of the Turkish forces. He was to be supported by take Larissa without resistance. But this plan was defeated.

General Doulous, at the head of one Greek division, forced the Turkish line at Roughaz, close to Tyrnavo, and general Mavromichele broke through at Konakos.

The two generals united their troops near Damaz. But news of the fall of Revent and of the imminent fall of Preveza, has changed the dimmy caused by the fall of Revent into the wildest rejoicing. The latest advices tonight are that the Greek troops are advancing to reconquer their position at Milosna and at Gritzovall, the latter of which has been abandoned owing to a misunderstanding by the general command who interpreted as an order to retreat. They really intended as an order to advance.

Captain Tagaro, who was wounded at Arta, is believed to have been avoided falling into the hands of the Turks. The Greek reports that the Turks lost 10,000 men, and that the Greek engineers constructed a bridge at Arta, and made their boats ready to cross the river.

It is said that the Turkish forces at Arta numbered more than 10,000.

NOTES OF THE DAY. In Boston the schoolboys have been enlisted in the work of keeping the streets clean and tidy. They have been organized into clubs and take a keen interest in the matter. The consumption of soap in India only reaches the modest amount of one ounce per head annually, and yet there are persons who have the nerve to compare Buddhism with Christianity.

A Chicago girl refused to let a Spiritualist seer on a murder trial jury there Tuesday afternoon. She said that she did not believe a man could be killed, in the common acceptance of that term.

This week is the worst of for the large number of people in it who are occasionally only what they ought to be perpetually, that they ought only to be occasionally.

A foreign count committed suicide in New York by jumping in the river. It developed that he couldn't raise cash enough to have his hair cut, and the American distress in the case would have long ago.

Boston has a committee of censors who visit the first night's production of every new theatrical production. They report back to the city council, and if the play is "yellow" it is at once prohibited.

"Marriage is a desperate thing. The first night of a play is a desperate thing, they had a great mind to some water, but they would not leap into the well because they could not get out again."

The Paris municipal council finds it difficult to get the streets clean and tidy. Strange to say, instead of having absolutely overrun its estimates it finds itself with a sum of 100,000 in the good of the street scavenging and cleaning account. The cause of this extraordinary state of affairs for a municipal council is not far to seek. The council had a general idea of the winter has practically done the council's work, and instead of having masses of snow to clear away and miles of frozen streets to salt the council has simply had to sit still and economize.

Little Thing Like That, However, Will Not Prevent Her From Fighting—Will Manage Somehow to Borrow Money to Buy Arms and Ammunition—Whole Question Hinges on the Action Taken by the Powers.

New York, April 19.—Colonel Francis V. Greene, United States army, retired, who was sent by this government to Russia during the last Turkish war to represent the war department, told of his observations of the Turkish army while in battle. "The Turks are individually good fighters," said Colonel Greene. "They are fine soldiers, very obedient, fanatical in their devotion, and fanatical. The Turk fights up to a certain point, and when he thinks matters are going against him he will run. Not for any lack of courage, however, because he thinks fate is against him. The Turkish soldiers are well armed. During the Russo-Turkish war the Turks were well equipped with the Russians. They were well clothed, their commissary and transportation systems were fatally defective. In numbers the Turkish army numbered 150,000 Greeks and 150,000 Armenians. These can probably be increased to three times as many on each side. In 1877 the Turks numbered 1,000,000 in the field in Europe and 1,000,000 in Asia. They were very much stronger resistance than the Russians anticipated. I think Russia put before half a million men in the field before the war was over. Turkey is bankrupt, but so was she in 1877, and that won't stop her from fighting. They will probably manage to borrow enough money to buy guns and ammunition, and they will get food out of their own country. The Turks 20 years ago fought an entirely unwarlike campaign. There is no reason why they should do so now. Their plan was to seize some important point and throw up fortifications, which they would defend with considerable skill, and then wait to be attacked behind their breastworks. They collected large amounts of ammunition and powder, and they waited for an attack. Some times their positions were turned. They were compelled to retreat and then they would abandon their positions, their stores and fall back on another line of fortifications 20 or 30 miles in the rear. Colonel Greene was asked his opinion as to the relative strength of the armies of Greece and Turkey. "There is no question," he said, "that the Turks are more than a match for the Greeks, and that the question is what stand the great powers will take. They are all extremely anxious to keep the peace, because if war is once started, it is impossible to stop it. It is impossible to say when it will end."

Buffalo, April 19.—After 18 rounds of rapid fighting Erne got the decision over Joe Hopkins (colored) of New York at the Olympic Athletic club tonight. At the end of the second act he made a speech in response to repeated calls. He said he would force Fitzsimmons to fight him again.

THE PARIS MARKET WOMAN.

Paris, April 19.—Madame, the market woman, solved the sex question long ago. She made man, at best, only a useful adjunct. In his younger days her husband may hope to take some part in conjugal affairs. As he grows older his rights slip away from him in direct ratio to the increase of madame's avoirdupois.

Madame's corsets begirt such a wealth of ethereal force that monsieur obeys orders without a demur. The more obscure his position, at the end of the day, the more he will find more ponderous is madame. Scarcely a no. still is allowed to have two fat persons. Some wise statesman may have declared that madame's apron is such a luxury was more than the city could afford; as experience may have proven that two fat persons in a single booth result in a quarrel for their madame's apron? Are the customers men? Not at all. They are women, for the most part. And a woman can bend her back and stoop for her madame's apron? They will tell you steadily on the main chance. She is the one who gathers in the sons and makes them go a long way. Monsieur of value, for Madam, she will tell you, but he is no financier.

It is on Wednesday and Saturday that the markets are held in open places in the heart of the city. A madame suddenly up in the morning and passing away suddenly at night. At 7 a. m. the Cours de la Reine looks like a desert, and by 11 o'clock the city is a madame's market. It is a madame's market, it is a madame's market, it is a madame's market. The iron support and their oil cloth covering which the government erects to protect madame and the astute and active citizenesses from the weather have not only been removed, but look as sharply as you will you will not find a single vestige of any of the madame's market.
