

THAT CANAL SCHEME.

The "Tribune" Sees in It a Bugaboo.

A BRIGHTON MAN'S OPINION.

The Project is Very Feasible and Can be Worked out by Co-Operation.

Since the mention of an interview of a Herald reporter with one of the canal men of the other side of Jordan, the papers of this city have had their say about the project, and in one or two instances have spoken of it with favor. But the Tribune, an organ which can see no good in anything even remotely connected with the Mormon people, or which will in anywise benefit a community in which Mormons reside, has its usual nonsensical objections to interpose, and urges its usual bugaboo yarn of a church scheme to hatch on the west of the river. But people who are conversant with the matter and know the situation of affairs in that locality, Gentle and Mormon, will laugh at the ignorance of the scribbler on the sheet named displays when he tackles the subject and puts forth the idea that the Mormons are going to "gobble" up all the land out west, because as much land is owned by Gentiles as by Mormons, if not more. Therefore, the fling of the Tribune will be taken for what it is worth.

The following correspondence, upon the subject gives a plain statement, which can not be misunderstood:

BRIGHTON, January 24, 1885. To the Editor of THE HERALD.

The conversation between your reporter and myself has been taken up by some of the other newspapers of the city, but they seem to misunderstand the meaning and subject of the conversation. I want everybody to understand that our canal is not an elephant on our hands. We have a good canal and in better condition than it ever has been, and when our present assessment is worked out it will bring down ample water for all who are now interested and who draw water from it.

I also want to ease the minds of the Tribune folks, that the church has neither land nor canals on this side of the river; therefore has no scheme to hatch. I will also state that there is as much land owned on this side of the river by Gentiles as there is by Mormons, who would be benefited by the water being taken out as I proposed. Now, it is a well-known fact that there were thousands of dollars lost in grain and labor, last spring, by the overflowing of the river from the Brighton dam to where it empties into the Salt Lake, a distance of about twelve miles, doing damage all the way, and even where the banks were built high enough to keep the water from overflowing, the ground along the river is so porous that when the water is high the seepage alone would destroy a great deal of the land and make it unfit for cultivation; thereby destroying the interest of the county as well as those immediately concerned. Land certainly would be worthless if it was under water, and the value of property would be so reduced that it would be a loss to the county as well as to the private individuals owning it.

Now the proposition to open a channel through the old slough is a very good one and would answer the purpose of draining the river first rate, but there is no place where the water through that channel could be utilized or taken out on land to do any good. On the other hand, by taking it through the Brighton canal, there are thousands of acres of land north and west of Brighton which could be irrigated by the water so taken out, and do a vast amount of good and also increase the revenue of the county.

We, the people living in Brighton, would like to see the whole valley under cultivation, and that can only be accomplished by getting the water on the surface of the ground. And I am convinced that if the county would make a move in the matter the people owning the land on both sides of the river would raise nearly enough money and labor to construct the whole canal, as it would be a benefit equally to those who had too much water and those who have none at present. And, again, the expense for the right of way would be very limited, if any, through our canal.

So I would say, if there is money to be spent in doing good, let it be put where it will do the most good to the greatest number.

PLEASANT VALLEY.

"Beautiful Snow" as Seen Down There.

Correspondence of THE HERALD.

At the present in Pleasant Valley the snow is about four feet deep on the level. It has been storming for the past few weeks and the poem entitled "The Beautiful Snow" is not very popular. The conductor on the branch road said the author of that poem would never write another on the same subject, if he had to run a train for one day in Pleasant Valley during the winter time. Once when a train was snowed in and a prominent official was picking snow by lamp light he was asked what he thought of the poem entitled "Beautiful Snow," to which he replied: "If I had that fellow here he would never have the privilege of writing another."

Mr. Editor, it's no use to write poems about "Beautiful Snow," for the people of these regions. When a man has to shovel through a five-foot drift every morning, then wallow through it to and from work, then carry water and coal and perform all similar labor when half buried, such poems do not produce pleasant thoughts. As a laborer remarked the other day: "It will do for those who have nothing to do but sit by a nice fire in a warm room, and read books, surrounded by geraniums, and all that sort of thing, but for us poor creatures it's no good." Let the poets write something about hot things (not too hot) if they wish to strike a kindred chord in this region. Let them write about sunny climes, orange blossoms, bananas, sun-burnt ankles, etc., or to come nearer home, bright fires, warm blankets, good dinners, and hot drinks. Any poet falling short of this, need not apply here for a situation.

Of course, fault-finders are never satisfied with anything, not even finding fault. The weather is too hot, or cold, wet or dry, to suit them. On the other hand, some are contented. One says, "This horrible snow!" The other says, "It will make water for irrigation next summer." Next summer, when the sun is shining brightly, one will find fault with the heat, while the other will say that it is good for vegetation. When the season is dry one will grumble at the dust, and the other will be glad that it is no worse. Then when it rains one will feel sorry because of the mud and the other will rejoice, because the dust will be laid. Thus live the happy and the miserable.

Where I am, where I can hitch to a light sleigh and furl the robes around two pairs of shoes, then let the beautiful snow fall in downy silence; and while the grumbler sits beside the fire finding fault with the fresh air and reading his poems about orange blossoms, sunny climes and hot cakes, may the merry sleigh-bells die on his ears in the distance, while the music of "The Beautiful Snow" runs like a silver thread through the throbbing breasts of two happy souls.

THE LIVER AND ITS FUNCTIONS.

It has become a well established fact that the larger portion of diseases to which the human family is subjected, arise from the liver. Some derangement of the Liver. This organ is not only the largest, but at the same time one of the most important. The venous blood, on its return to the heart, passes through this organ, and in its passage the impurities also the secretions which are necessary for digestion as well as for a healthy state of the system, are filtered out of the blood, and the liver is thus enabled to get rid of order to a greater or less extent, and when this occurs it is possible for it to properly fulfil its office, in moving all objectionable matter from the blood, but should it be unable to do so, the result is a disease of which it should have been relieved.
