IN MEMORY OF M'KINLEY

John Hay Pronounces Eulogy Upon the Martyr President.

Distinguished Gathering in Hall of House of Representatives, Including President Roosevelt, Prince Henry of Prussia, the Cabinet and Diplomats Listen to Oration.

Washington, Feb. 27. — At noon today in the hall of the House of Representatives, in the presence of President Roosevelt, Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the German Emperor, the members of the Cabinet, the Judges of the Supreme court, the General of the army and Admiral of the navy and many other officers of the army and navy who have received the thanks of Congress, the Ambassadors and other diplomatic representatives of foreign countries, the Senators and Representatives in Congress and a large number of distinguished guests, the Hon. John Hay, Secretary of State, pronounced a eulogy upon the late President.

LAST TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Only one year ago, less five days, at the head of an imposing civic and military pageant, McKinley passed triumphantly along Pennsylvania avenue, where now his body lies in state, for his second inaugural. His months at Buffalo, and speeches to different sort of people, this city through the capital of the country, his visits to the tombs of the Washington and Grant, also the brief funeral oration was delivered over his coffin and the tributes of the nations of the earth about his bier, the whole is a unusual sorrow. To-day we meet, with uncovered head, for the same task in last tribute of respect and public expression to bring it.

NO ORDINARY PROCESSION.

Again the broad avenue was filled with vast crowds as it was a year ago. Then the throng were a sea of glinting bayonets and nodding plumes. To-day it was filled with the music of human and suppressed memorial bands. Today all was changed. The procession was unorganized. No martial music lightened the toil of the throng; no cheers greet the ear. The only sound was the tramp of cavalry escorting three of the Cabinet officers, Prince Henry and his party to the Capitol and carriage here and there conveying officers in uniform or diplomats in full costume to the place where the eulogy was to be delivered.

MOURNING AT CAPITAL.

The sad the extent of the outward manifestation. For the people was one for the road and beach, rather than for the streets and air. Notwithstanding it was proclaimed in advance that admission to the hall of Representatives and even to the Capitol itself was to be restricted to those holding cards, the people rebelled at the precaution. Thousands thronged the great marble pile up on the hill. While the ticket holders besieged the great doors, down to the entrance of the corridors, overflowed the people who did more pushing to get to the grounds than to hear the eulogy. The crowds were kept back by lines of nine-coated officers stood on the three sides of the Capitol in front of the Capitol.

MUTE EMBLEM MOURNING.

The mute emblem of mourning at the Capitol was the Stars fluttering at half-mast above the two wings and on the dome of the building. This precedent in the case of the President was followed by the Executive Mansion. The hall was similarly draped in mourning of one character. The red and Roman tinted story strong, was draped in the corridor which separates the hall from the rear lobby of the House.

BLACK WITH PEOPLE.

When the doors were opened at 11 o'clock the chairs were speared, and in the spacious galleries surrounding the chamber were filled with dense mass of people. Even the aisles were filled, but the crowding and pushing which have marred so many occasions of the kind was averted. Only the ticket holders were admitted promptly to the number of seats provided.

GATHERING: A DISTINGUISHED ONE.

Only one was given to each Senator and Representative, and the gathering was a most distinguished one. The floor of the House was especially notable. They had actually themselves for the occasion, forgetting the occasion, and there were rendered by the gentlemen of their appearance.

Gradually the members of the House and Senate took their places. The Senators filled the chairs at the left of the Speaker's desk, upholstered with red plush, and the Representatives those on the right. To increase the seating capacity of the floor.

PRINCE AND PRESIDENT.

In the area in front of the Speaker's desk were placed for the occasion upholstered chairs for the President, Prince Henry of Prussia, the Vice President, the Cabinet, the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme court.

Directly in front of the Democratic members of the House were placed chairs for the diplomatic corps, the members of the Governors of the States, the Justices of the District of Columbia and other invited guests, while in front of the Speaker's desk were placed chairs for the Senators.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME.

At 11 o'clock the Marine band began the musical programme, which was followed by Prayer by Rev. Dr. Bagby, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church. Hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," by the choir. Reading Scripture Lesson, Rev. Dr. Sullivan, rector of St. John's Church.
