I should see the sun flashing from his sword hilt and the buckles on his shoes.

I would choose

To lead him in a maze along the patterned paths, A bright and laughing maze for my heavy-booted lover,

Till he caught me in the shade, And the buttons of his waistcoat bruised my body as he clasped me,

Aching, melting, unafraid. With the shadows of the leaves and the sundrops, And the plopping of the waterdrops, All about us in the open afternoon—

I am very like to swoon With the weight of this brocade, For the sun shifts through the shade.

Underneath the fallen blossom In my bosom, Is a letter I have hid.

It was brought to me this morning by a rider from the Duke.

"Madam, we regret to inform you that Lord Hartwell

Died in action Thursday sen'night." As I read it in the white, morning sunlight, The letters squirmed like snakes.

"Any answer, Madam," said my footman.

"No," I told him.

"See that the messenger takes some refreshment. No, no answer."

And I walked into the garden, Up and down the patterned paths, In my stiff, correct brocade.

The blue and yellow flowers stood up proudly in the sun,

Each one.

I stood upright too, Held rigid to the pattern By the stiffness of my gown.

Up and down I walked, Up and down.

In a month he would have been my husband.

In a month, here, underneath this lime,

We would have broken the pattern;

He for me, and I for him,

He as Colonel, I as Lady,

On this shady seat.

He had a whim

That sunlight carried blessing.

And I answered, "It shall be as you have said."

Now he is dead.

In Summer and in Winter I shall walk

Up and down

The patterned garden paths

In my stiff, brocaded gown.

The squills and daffodils

Will give place to pillared roses, and to asters, and to snow.

I shall go

Up and down,

In my gown.

Gorgeously arrayed,

Boney and Stayed.

And the softness of my body will be guarded from embrace

By each button, hook, and lace.

For the man who should loose me is dead,

Fighting with the Duke in Flanders,

In a pattern called a war.

Christ! What are patterns for?

Young Man—I have called, sir, to request the hand of your daughter in marriage.

Grumbells—Has she accepted you?

Young Man—Yes, sir.

Grumbells—Then what do you want to come around and bother me with your troubles for?

Try One Of Our New Gas Irons

It is worth trying.

It will do a big ironing for two cents.

The heat can be regulated.

It does not get out of order.

It is pointed at both ends.

Women who have used other irons for years are delighted with it.

We don't ask you to buy it—now.

Just let us send you one on trial.
