

right at the surface of ground over which miners and prospectors have trudged for the last fifty years. Such was the recent zinc discovery at the Wasatch Mines. The new ore body in the South Hecla is producing a rich silver ore from the Wedge fissure at a rate which promises to put it in the dividend class before the end of the year and some consider the strike made by lessees in a raise from the Quincy tunnel level as big a thing as the 20-foot ore body in the Wedge ore shoot. And take the Emma Copper! It matters little what the stock does on the exchange. If the management has a big spur from the Old Emma's magnificent $11,000,000 ore shoot it will be able to snap its fingers at bulls and bears alike.

The Alta Tunnel & Transportation company is hastening to the assistance of Alta Con. and Emma as well as the Prince of Wales and Michigan-Utah mines. It will not only unwater these properties several hundred feet deeper than they have been able to drive in the past, but it will derive from its water flow power enough to run all the drills and move all the tramcars required to carry on from its level mining operations in the four properties. The tunnel company is about to lease the one ore-bearing vein cut and the ore bids fair at this writing to enter a new vein in its own ground. Manganese seams have just been cut and the lime is beginning to soften up as it usually does near a vein.

There is no reason to doubt that the total earnings of the Park City mines will be considerably increased when the Daly-Judge and Silver King Coalition begin to use their new oil flotation plants. The values recovered by the new method are those which have been allowed to float away in the streams, benefitting nobody. The Silver King Consolidated has averaged only 50 tons a day as ore settlements up to August 19, but on this relatively light tonnage it has cleared about $32 a ton in net profits and earned $17,000 more than its dividend requirements for the whole month. Insiders say that the King Con. can maintain its present output for many years without exhausting the ore measures which have been so thoroughly developed.

FAREWELL, ME LOVE, FAREWELL!

By T. G.

Again the summer passes, once again,
The pressing agents, in a press invitatory,
Suggest the season's simmer is to wane,
And then continue with the purport of their story;
Which is that Saltair is about to close,
So you whose inclinations are aquatic,
Must buy a ticket quick and hold your nose,
And get your nerve, though it may be neurotic.

Ah! Sad that with the coming of the moon
Of harvest, that the trains will cease to rattle;
Pathetic that the lovers who would spoon,
Defer the joy of being packed like cattle.
No more may bathers find the souvenirs
That calmly float about in their vicinity;
No longer will their gastronomic fears
Assail them dining there with an affinity.

Ah! Must we wait the weary winter through
Till June shall come and roses blow beside her?
Until we reach the beach, and—Murder! Pugh!—
And smell the smell again and spy the spider?
Now, Joseph, Summer's gone, and gone the bunk,
And garnered are the golden gains of gleaners,
So take your great big brother of the skunk,
Be a good sport and send it to the cleaners.
