

would play it with the force, understanding and gripping interest that Robert Hilliard put into it, he could at least have come to life when the occasion required and helped the others who were endeavoring to make the production a fine one.

The great part of James T. Hurley was slighted by Mr. Hitner and the unseemly levity indulged in by Clifford Thompson throughout the play ruined even the comedy of his part. Huron L. Blyden as Daniel Colt, a government expert in the secret service, is the real star of the production and created the most favorable impression he has made since his arrival here. The role in his hands is absolutely perfect. The ladies of the company were uniformly better than the men and acquitted themselves with great credit, particularly Miss Bryant and Miss Sinclair. But there was no pep in the performance, it was placid as a summer sea and those who saw the play for the first time with Mr. Smythe as Asche Kayton, haven't seen it yet.

REX

There is a fashion show scheduled for the first three days of this week at the Rex theatre. Valeska Suratt, is the bright particular star of the monster Fox production "The Soul of Broadway" which is to play that theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Said the producer when he prepared for the production to Miss Suratt, "We want a complete exposition of the latest fashions in all manner of gowns for women."

Said Miss Suratt: "You shall have everything that the market affords."

Says the press agent for the production: "Miss Suratt wears one hundred and forty different costumes during the progress of the story."
