"We want the grave right. Say about another foot."

"Say, pard, did you ever read in the Bible about the 'Peace on earth, good will to men,' that they teach about this time of year. Would you spoil an orphan's Christmas by treatin' him this way?"

"Cut that stuff, Jake. It don't get ye anywhere with us. You'll have to come across with something better n' that."

"How does this strike ye?"

As he landed the query he threw up a chunk of rock that glistened with free gold.

"Good boy," shouted his partners, after they had examined the specimen.

"I locate this claim," he yelled.

They pulled him out of the hole and shook his hand warmly.

They were not long in scrawling a location notice on a scrap of paper and posting it over the find.

"Might call the claim The Gravedigger," remarked Jake, and it went down that way.

The way those three men celebrated Christmas was something scandalous, even for Tonopah.

The mine is now one of the regular dividend payers of the district, and the partners have never had the slightest friction since the location of the property.—San Francisco News Letter.

The wounded Highlander in hospital was very depressed, and seemed to make no headway toward recovery. He was forever talking about his "bonnie Scotland," and the idea occurred to the doctor that a Scotch piper might rouse his spirits.

After some hunting around a piper was found, and it was arranged that he should present himself outside the hospital that night, and pour forth all the gems of Scottish music the pipes were capable of interpreting. This he did.

When the astute doctor turned up the next morning he eagerly asked the matron:

"Did the piper turn up?"

"He did," replied the matron.

"And how's our Scotch patient?"

"Oh, he's fine; I never saw such a change," said the matron.

"That's grand. It was a fine idea of mine to get that piper," said the delighted doctor.

"Yes," said the matron, sadly, "but the other fifty patients have all had a serious relapse.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Many instances have been quoted of the ingenuity of the school boy and the college man in answering examination questions in foreign languages, but seldom has a hard-pressed undergraduate displayed the inventive genius shown by Henry W. Savage when his knowledge of French was put to the test in a Parisian cafe some years ago. According to George Ade, who was with him at the time, Savage prides himself on his French. He had just succeeded by dint of the most intense sort of concentration in ordering those copper-colored oysters known to the habitués of Paris as being among the oldest inhabitants. Then, flushed with victory, he rashly decided to follow up his success by ordering some horseradish. The French word for "horseradish" had completely escaped his memory. Nothing daunted, he became at once logical and ingenious. "Horse is cheval," said he to Ade, "and red is rouge all right, but I'm damned if I can remember the French word for 'ish.'"—Argonaut.

The customer in the grocery store, having ruined his clothes, was hopping mad. "Didn't you see that sign, 'Fresh Paint?'" asked the grocer. "Of course I did," snapped the customer, "but I've seen so many signs hung up here announcing something fresh that wasn't that I did not believe it."—San Francisco News Letter.
