

more than ordinary interest, due to its effective treatment by the players as well as the technical staff. A spectacular interest is included in this screen play through the filming of the grand opera scenes in a real metropolitan playhouse, The Morosco, the show-going center of Los Angeles, conceded to be the finest theater on the Pacific coast.

In addition to providing the star with a wide range in which to assert her sterling ability as an actress, "The Tongues of Men" offers Miss Collier an opportunity to display her remarkable skill with draperies. In the classical scenes of the opera, "Zaporah," the mythical opera mentioned in the story, the beautiful leading lady comes into her own in this respect, all draperies being sewn on her, never cut to fit. As fitting backgrounds to the famous English actress, the producers have furnished elaborate sets which are greatly enhanced through beautiful photographic and scenic displays.

Supporting Constance Collier, Oliver Morosco has selected another notable cast headed by Forrest Stanley, as the Rev. Penfield Sturgis, who denounces from the pulpit the grand opera "Zaporah" and its prima donna, notwithstanding the fact that he has never witnessed the performance. Other important roles are entrusted to such artists as Herbert Standing, Lamar Johnstone, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Helen Eddy, the newest "find" in filmdom, and Elizabeth Burbridge.

Frank Lloyd, whose remarkable direction of "The Gentleman from Indiana" has brought him to the fore, staged the latest Morosco offering, the camera work having been handled by that expert, Fred Dobson.

BALLAD OF FRENCH RIVERS

By Christopher Morley.
Of streams that men take honor in
The Frenchman looks to three,
And each one has for origin

The hills of Burgundy.
And each has known the quivers
Of blood and tears and pain—
O gallant bleeding rivers,
The Marne, the Meuse, the Aisne.

Says Marne: "My poplar fringes
Have felt the Prussian tread,
The blood of brave men tinges
My banks with lasting red;
Let others ask due credit,
But France has me to thank;
Von Kluck himself has said it:
I turned the Boche's flank!"

Says Meuse: "I claim no winning,
No glory on the stage,
Save that, in the beginning,
I strove to save Liege.
Alas that Frankish rivers
Should share such shame as mine—
In spite of all endeavors
I flow to join the Rhine!"

Says Aisne: "My silver shallows
Are saltier than the sea,
The woe of Rheims still hallows
My endless tragedy.
Of rivers rich in story
That run through green Champagne,
In agony and glory,
The chief am I, the Aisne!"

Now there are other waters
That Frenchmen all hold dear—
The Rhone, with many daughters,
That runs so icy clear;
There's Moselle, deep and winy,
There's Loire, Garonne, and Seine,
But, oh, the valiant, tiny
Marne and Meuse and Aisne!
—San Francisco Town Talk.

A number of local Grand Army veterans were having a reunion, and were entertaining brother members from a neighboring state. Some of the visiting veterans protested against certain proposed legislation by the state assembly.

One of the speakers became so vehement in his remarks and painted the situation so despairingly that an earnest auditor, overwhelmed by the oratory, jumped to his feet and cried excitedly.

"Comrades, is it possible that we died in vain?"

"I've got to sit up with a sick friend to-night," he said. "Well," she retorted, "I hope you do him good," and from the way she said it he knew that he hadn't "got by."—Detroit Free Press.

"Every one seems to be here for his health," remarked the new arrival at the summer resort. "Yes, every one but the hotel proprietor," replied the guest who had been there three days.—Judge.

"Would you go to war for your country?" "Would I go to war for my country? I'd do more than that. I'd lick any man who tried to get my country into a war."—Detroit Free Press.
