In net balancing. Secretary Daniels is giving us the sailor's hornpipe, and the prospect of the European post-bellum dumping policy has given Secretary Redfield the St. Vitus dance. They are all on the government salary roll.

A press dispatch from Providence, R. I., states that 30,000 employes in the Rhode Island cotton mills are to receive a 5 per cent increase in wages. The increase is voluntarily made. The report adds: "The war has made the cotton business so prosperous that the bleachers and finishers are expected to give the same increase to their employes." Will the Democratic "peace and prosperity" slogan beguile these employes into voting the Democratic ticket in November? Not much! The year before the war will be too fresh in their memories.

An old friend of ours dropped in the other day and was discussing the McAdoo method of book-keeping in the federal treasury. "It reminds me," he said, "of a butcher whom I knew in my boyhood. A woman was buying some liver and the butcher reckoned the account like this: 'Eight pounds at eight cents a pound. Eight eights is eighty-eight. Take it for eighty cents, ma'am.'"

The navy department is making no effort to proceed with the building of the battleships which congress authorized ten months ago. The longer the administration can postpone the expenditure of money, the better Mr. McAdoo's doctored treasury statement will appear. The cause of national defense may suffer, but that is of small consequence to an administration whose chief desire is to defend itself.

There is no quarrel between Wilson and Bryan. All there is to it is the fact that Bryan intends to defeat Wilson. But there is no quarrel. Oh, no! Ask any Wilson man.
