'CELLO.

'Cello, what a language thine,
All the higher senses 'waking,
All Life's swellest dreams a-making—
Ah! that 'twere a part of mine,
For thy message is divine!

Often in the silent night
Back thine accents come a-winging,
Come unto my soul-self singing
Depths of feeling none may write—
What unfathomable delight!

'Cello, what may half express
All the joy and all the sorrow,
All the pathos and distress
That is uttered when you sing,
Answering the souls that call you,
Answering the love they bring;
'Cello, what wild language thine,
Earthly never, human ever,
Life's endeavor, all divine!

WORDS.

By Elsa Barker.

Why do our words divide us like a wall,
And only in the stillness, through the eyes
Or the rapt kiss, our spirits in surprise
Rush flaming on each other? When you call
My wrath to you afar, it brings you all
My dumb lips dare not carry. We disguise
The soul with veils of speech—poor soul that tries

To pour the ocean through a pipe so small!
O for the courage to endure the flame
Of God's tremendous silence heart to heart
On the sheer height where weak words are forgot—

Where faith is all the foothold, and the aim
Only to find the soul its counterpart
In the white sphere where space and time are not. —Smart Set.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Management of the Louvre Rathskeller Has Secured Famous Hungarian Orchestra.

You who love and appreciate good music, good fellowship and the best of cuisine—for you to whom Bohemia's charms appeal and who are wont to slip from the worries and cares of the day into an atmosphere of relaxation and healthy pleasure—the Louvre has another splendid attraction.

It is the Royal Hungarian orchestra. There is perhaps no musical organization in the country similar or equal to this orchestra, and we have secured its services at great expense. We believe we have always had the best music in Salt Lake, and it is better now than ever.

Our new, light, airy, scrupulously clean and sanitary kitchen has cost us several hundreds of dollars of late and here again results are telling the story of our foresight. Our ladies' luncheons in the afternoons are proving splendidly successful. It is delightfully cool and restful to drop in for a few minutes during the busy shopping hours and select a tasty little lunch from the teas, coffees, chocolate, sandwiches, salads and dainties that we serve between 2:30 and 5:30 p. m.

The Louvre—the smart place to eat.
