POLITICAL—PERSONAL.

Within the next twenty-four hours, and possibly before the Weekly is in the mails, the Federal Grand Jury will in all probability complete its investigation of the theft of $106,500 from the reserve chest of the Utah National bank some time prior to last January.

For twenty hours past the jury has momentarily been expected to close its work and report. Thursday night all the witnesses in the investigation were discharged with the exception of "Doc" Londoner, the Pinkerton detective, who has been here with one or more of his men, since early in January, to the tune of from $1,800 to $2,100 a month from the Utah National. Men who have watched the deliberations of the jury closely expected a report Thursday night.

Beyond all question of a doubt, as far as every outward indication goes, there will be from one to three indictments returned.

If current rumors are to be believed the jury has stirred the animals in more ways than one since it re-convened for the investigation of the bank scandal. Detective Londoner was not called at the first session of the jury a month or more ago, but during the past few weeks he has been on the carpet half a dozen times. Some interesting statements have been floating about town recently as emanating from the Pinkerton agents that they got so far in their investigation of the theft of the $106,500 and were stopped by officials of the bank. The reports may have been true or false, but a personal recital of such facts by Mr. Londoner before the grand jury ought to have livened things up some at the Federal building.

When the grand jury returns, an investigation that has cost in hard cash from $15,000 to $20,000 will have but scarcely started, providing one or more indictments are returned. One or more long, hard trials will unquestionably follow. It is now five months since the first news of the theft from the Utah National was given the public. For the man who could compile a detailed report of the investigation with all its twists and turns, ramifications and not a few very sensational developments, there should be a small fortune—and for the public a book that would make "Three Weeks" read like a congressional report in comparison.

Loose, Spry and Cutler is the three-cornered project thrown into the political ring this week and which is being vigorously booted down the field toward the gubernatorial goal.

The governor came out with a very ladylike little statement announcing his candidacy, and the church promptly sat down on him with an expression of positive weariness. The Loose and Spry factions have been at it ever since and it looks very much as though the marshal has a lead that will eventually land him the nomination.

Provo in an hour and twenty-five minutes is going some.

Samuel Newhouse has taken down another record—and his own at that. The run Tuesday was made in the six cylinder Pierce and with seven people in the car. Harold Peery and Mr. Newhouse held the watches on Bert from the East Brigham street house, and there can be no question of the time in which the run was made.

It takes nerve to ride to Provo at any pace and nerve is hardly the word when the clip is one-twenty-five.

Fuller deserves a lot of credit for the trip. He has made runs about Salt Lake that entitles him to a chance in some of the big eastern meets.

Incidentally he thinks he can do Provo in one-fifteen.

The chairman of the Republican City Committee Chief of the Fire Department—and Jim Devine the man, at that!
