Next Wednesday, July 15th, a qualifying round for the women's handicap cup, offered by President Gemmell, will be played. Not enough cards have been turned in to admit of any accurate handicapping, with one or two exceptions, and this qualifying round will be unusual in that the handicaps for the match play to follow will be based largely on the results. The greens committee held a prayerful meeting, and a sad one, and could figure out no other way of salvation—for themselves.

On July 22nd will take place the first round of match play. The second round is scheduled for July 25, and the finals in the July play for the cup will be played on July 29th. All rounds will be at nine holes. The women's tees will be ready by Wednesday, and the almost impossible tee shots for the first, second, and fifth holes will be done away with.

The qualifying round in the July play for the Directors' cup is down for today (Saturday). This will be at 18 holes, as usual, and the subsequent match play will also be at 18 holes. The dates for this, and for the July handicap, are as follows:

July 18—First round match play, Directors' cup, 18 holes.

July 19—Second round, match play, Directors' cup.

July 25—Finals, July play, Directors' cup.

July 25—Qualifying round, July handicap, 18 holes. Eight to qualify.

July 26—Match play, July handicap, including finals, all rounds at 9 holes.

Willie Hoare's score of 34, made a few days ago, will probably stand the assaults of ambitious golfers for several summer moons. He followed this round with a 36, a total of 70 for 18 holes, which is even safer than the 34. We may grow about those jumpy greens all we want to, but it takes something besides luck to make two rounds in those figures, and the club professional is to be congratulated on his play.

At least one thing was brought out prominently in the play last week for the June handicap cup, and that was that the handicaps were about as close as they can be figured. Three matches were won by one hole, and only one appeared one-sided, the match between George Holman and Bob Gemmell. Yet Holman's victory, 3 up 2 to play in a nine-hole match, did not by any means indicate their average play. Holman played his usual steady game; Gemmell did not; and there you are. Walker Salisbury should have won his second match, as he was 3 up playing for the sixth hole. But a topped iron shot which put the ball in the ditch guarding the 8th hole, and a missed putt on the home green defeated him. Mr. Wicks, although defeated in the finals, yet showed that he is getting back into the form which made him one of the top-notchers last summer. His second round with Thompson, in which he made a score of 41, was pretty fast going.

Frank McGurra is in Portland. Needless to say, so are a tremendous majority of his golf clubs. A postal from him says the course is good, and that he is playing every day with Jack Gilmer. All things considered, therefore, there is little reason to fear that Mac is fretting away his fair young life because he isn't in on the home club musses.

Harry Davis made two shots at the Country club last week that are worth gabbling about. With a slight favoring wind, he drove to the ditch for the second hole, and his second shot, played with a cleek, was two yards past the cup and five yards to the right of the green. Playing for the seventh hole, he drove to the ditch, and his second shot, with a brassy, carried the ditch guarding the green. That's some shooting.
