

House Cleaning by Electricity

marks an important advance in the applications of electricity to the burdens of mankind.

The vacuum cleaning process, which heretofore has been available only for the cleaning of large buildings regularly and for cleaning residences occasionally, has been developed now to a point where it is available in every household for the daily sweeping and dusting.

Portable machines similar to the one shown in the cut can be purchased at a reasonable first cost, and may be operated for about 2½ cents per hour. They are mounted on rollers and are easily taken from room to room. It is necessary only to connect to your nearest light socket and turn the switch.

The dust is not stirred up from the floor only to settle on the walls, furniture and decorations, as with the old method. It is removed from the room by this new process.
