Apostle Smoot's Re-Election

APOSTLE REED SMOOT was re-elected Senator on Wednesday last, as per program. His election was but as a vote at conference sustaining the priesthood. He, having been set apart for that service, the formal vote was a mere perfunctory affair. He was not the choice of even the Mormon people. Thousands of them have felt the shame that his former election brought upon the Mormon creed and people, and would have gladly seen him draw out of the place, but they are helpless under the pitiless domination of the chief priests. They are entitled to pity; the Gentiles that approved of him merely represent that attribute of poor human nature which causes men to fawn that thrift may follow.

The Mormon creed has within its ranks many educated and clear-brained men who would make accomplished Senators. That all are brushed aside that an apostle may have the place, merely illustrates anew the tyranny of the institution and that the higher priesthood shall rule in all things.

That intelligent men can be so bound and branded under the lights of the present age is a marvelous fact; that it can be done under the free government of this republic is still more wonderful.

That not one of them has the manhood to stand up and denounce the organ that every day declares that they are all free agents, that not one church letter binds their honest manhood, is only another evidence of their thralldom.

Reed Smoot is a capable business man, so far as acquiring money is concerned. When as a boy he forced his employees to pay back to him ten per cent of the wages he agreed to pay them.— See Jesse Knight's statement—he has been successful in a business way. But to think of him as a member of that august body which frames the laws of this republic, makes one sorry for—Utah.

Add to that the fact that he does not carry to that body the honest allegiance of an American citizen; that there is a power here which he respects and fears more than he does all the authority of the executive, the legislative and the judicial power of this republic, and the cup is full, and popular free government is given the grand ha! ha!

Medicine or What?

IT WOULD be an item of interest could a statement of how much Peruna is sold in Utah every month be obtained. It would be of interest because only a few months ago a statement was everywhere published that Peruna had been carefully analyzed and that it consisted of nothing but some drugs and a vile decoction of whisky or gin.

It would be interesting to know how many have signed petitions during the past two weeks, asking the Legislature to pass a water-tight prohibition law, who are ready to testify to the healing and strengthening effects of Peruna. There are a dozen other "healing" compounds, sold under the name of patent medicines, the base of which is merely schnopps or whisky of the rottenest kind. When prohibition is declared the law in Utah, what a boom it will be for the drug-stores!
