THE COLONELS.

By Tod Goodwin.

Oh, presidents, and potentates, and others of your ilk,
Take heed of our new governor, whose work is
fine as silk;
And next when on your staffs you mean to put a classy guy,
Just send a billet doux to Bill, whose other name is Spry.
For in his staff of life—that is, official life—he knows
Just the proper person for the place the person goes.
And with Loose as commissary, there will be no
cause to mourn
But—
Will the corn be in the Colonels or the Colonels
in the corn?

The commissary general, who is Colonel C. E.
Loose,
Is a man of vast experience and never so obtuse
As to fail to heed a signal from a brother officer,
In case a fine official tongue is coated thick with fur.
And so it is with happiness, they welcome Colonel
Ed,
And compliment the choosing by the broad official
head.
In uniforms of blue and brass, the landscape
they'll adorn
But—
Will the corn be in the Colonels, or the Colonels
in the corn?

Says Colonel Kessler: "Colonel Loose, I feel a little faint."
Says Colonel Loose to Colonel K.: "Huh! who in — here ain't?"
Says Colonel Jackling: "Colonel Loose, my Utah
Copper's hot.
Out on the target range you know—" "Come on," says Loose, "Why not?"
Says Colonel Wright to Colonel Loose: "I will prescribe for two."
Says Colonel Newhouse riding up: "Well, Ed, the game to you."
And Badger, Daynes and Booth arrive, not one of them forlorn,
For—
The corn is in the Colonels, not the Colonels in the corn.

The absolute injustice of including the "Heidelberg"
in the investigation conducted by the Jelectable Councilman Fernstrom last Saturday evening and the subsequent advertising it received, is apparent to everyone who has ever been near the place. Mr. Karl H. Mayer is a man of standing in the community and both his cafe and bar are conducted in a manner in which even the narrowest ministerial spell-binder could find no fault. The "Heidelberg" enjoys the patronage of the best and most orderly people of the city and to include it in a list of dives such as those mentioned in the remainder of the story, looks very much like persecution rather than a desire to improve the morals of the community.

Oliver-the-Little.

(From the "Life of Oliver Cromwell," by Theodore Roosevelt.)

Had Cromwell not become cursed with the love of power, had he not acquired a dictatorial habit of mind and the fatal incapacity to acknowledge that there might be righteousness in other methods than his own, he would certainly have avoided
a break with this Parliament.
