

THE DREAMER.

By Frank Dempster Sherman.

O Moon, art thou a pearl snow white,
Shut in an azure shell,
That in the shadow sea of Night
Inviolate doth dwell?

Or else art thou a wonder flower—
A lily fair whose face
Makes beautiful the blue deep bower
In the Dusk's garden place?

Then said the rounded Moon agleam:
Dreamer, canst thou not guess?
I am the mirror of thy dream
Of love and happiness.
—New York Sun

LOVE'S SECRETS.

By Charlotte Becker.

Love had a little grief
So sweet and free of guile
That, lest joy hold it fief,
He hid it with a smile.

Love had a little joy,
So pure and crystal clear
That, lest grief it destroy
He hid it in a tear.

And grief has ne'er discerned
Joy in her fear, the while
That joy has never learned
Grief lay within her smile!
—New York Sun

TIRED OUT.

By M. D. Prior.

To the assembled alphabet
The letter "I" then said:
"My master's going to Africa
And I am going to bed."
—New York Sun.

NECESSARY.

By J. P. G.

Sure! Raise the President's wages
A hundred thousand dollars,
E'en though Ben Tillman rages
And every tightwad hollers!

It must be done, let who will scoff—
And may the gods quick speed it!
For if Taft keeps on playing golf
You bet your life he'll need it!
—New York Sun.

THE REVELATION IN THE MOUNTAIN.

Mrs. Major's new book, "Revelation in the Mountain," has been received. This book, through a series of chapters, seeks to illustrate the practices and purposes of Mormonism. The descriptions are vouched for by the author as true incidents and facts, and beyond what they reveal of the spirit of Mormonism, show directly what that spirit leads to in unrestrained practice. The book is prepared in catching form and illustrated. The narrative is fascinatingly prepared by a gifted author and a decided addition to the faithful record of Utah since its first settlement sixty-two years ago.
