periencing the pleasures of an individual starring season this year in "Love Watches," and Mr. Drew has given Rose Coghlan the leading feminine role of "Jack Straw." Mary Boland, Grace Henderson and Frank Goldsmith are also numbered among Mr. Drew's support. "Jack Straw" will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, with a matinee Saturday.

"A Message from Mars," when well presented, is clever and entertaining. In the hands of the troupe of kerosene circuit stars at the Colonial this week it is an insufferable bore. The engagement closes with two performances today.

Ralph Stuart, the new leading man at the Bungalow, has proven himself an excellent actor this week in his initial appearance here in "By Right of Sword," his own play. Possessed of a pleasing stage presence and an engaging personality, he is ably qualified to take the leads in the best line of stock plays to be secured. "By Right of Sword" is a rather romantic conception of a Russian story, with plenty of intrigue and action. However, despite its decided dramatic tendency, it is well told, the situations are capably handled and climaxes good. Mr. Stuart takes the leading role well, and Miss Hall is seen to better advantage than for two or three weeks.

Tomorrow night the company presents Kenneth MacDonald's satire on society, "The Transgressor." It is said the various roles in the production afford excellent opportunities for light character work. After the presentation of "The Transgressor," Mr. Stuart and Miss Hall will produce "At the Rainbow's End," written by Franklin Fyles, the noted New York dramatic reviewer, and Mr. Stuart.
