

MRS. CASEY ON PHILOSOPHY.

Philosopher Dooley of Chicago discovered and photographed by Peter Finley Dunne, has a soul-mate in New York, found and credibly reported by one of the bright young men on the staff of the New York Sun's city editor. Mrs. Casey may become Mrs. Dooley later, but at present she sells fruit near the entrance to the Brooklyn bridge and d'scusses on this, that, and the other to the friendly newspaperman. Witness this evidence of affinity with the sage of Archey Road:

If you wud be happy know what ye want to do that won't get ye into jail and do it. No philosopher ever went to jail. He stopped being a philosopher before he got there.

Ye may have to fight for it. All right. The man—or leddy—who wouldn't fight for what he wants does not deserve to get what he wants.

Ye'll hear people without our learnin' blaming men for being stingy. Ye might as well blame them for having blue eyes or a black beard. Wud ye say that blue eyes was a bad habit? Ye might if ye was foolish.

Ph'losophy is a gr'eat thing. If I didn't have it there's many a man I'd give a clout on the jaw for being this or being that whin I might as well give him the back av me hand for his unpleasant habit of having a nose that was longer than me own.

Polytics is the same. Whin I was young and ignorant and Casey was what my Michael is now—young and handsome and full of polytics—I'd fight for h's polytics as qu'ck as I'd take a cup of tea wid a frind, and enjoy it as much. 'Twas worriting work at that, for Casey was an independent; he'd be all for the parthy what wud give the most for to spind in his precinct. "And why not, darlint?" he'd say to me. "If there's anny difference betune the two except which will do the most for ye I've nler found it out." So wan ellection I'd be fighting the leddy on the fure above and taking tea wid the wan on the floor below, and the next ellection 'twud be the other way 'round. In that way I learnt the strent of the tea and the ar'm of all me neighbors.

My Michael is not the same. He's a strong parthy man. 'Tis the principle of the thing that gets him. Whin he was eighteen our district leader backed him for to lick a Coent's Slip bully. Whin they took the bully to Gouveneur hospital the leader give Michael the money he'd won on him, and he says, "What's ye're polytics, Casey?"

"What's yours," says Michael. "I'm for Joodge Par-ker," says the leader. "So am I," says Michael; "who is he and what's he running for and on what ticket?" says Michael, and he's never changed his polytics since.

I love him for sticking to his principles, but I cud relish having him get some of the good things what come to the precinct captain on the other side. There's a laad my Michael cud put out wid one punch, but he gets invitations from h's district leader to grub at wan iv thim swell snares on Broadway, where, as Michael says, ye sit down to a hundred dollars' worth of food and a thousand dollars' worth of booze, wid a band playing on one side of ye and a dozen dolls from the leading t'eatres on the other side, eating lobsters wid Long Acre cutups, while the raypoorters ar're going the rounds finding out whic is among those prisint and who has got her divorcee and who has been indicted for racetrack gambling and all the other things whats' going on in so clety.—Argonaut.

Phatboy—Why did you have such an ugly looking cur as that stuffed? Binks (with emotion)—That dog saved my life. Phatboy—Well, well! How? Binks—When we got back from our wedding tour my wife baked a cake for me, and the dog ate it.—Half-Holiday.

"There goes a man who once offered to make me independently rich." "But he didn't appear to know you. At least he gave you no sign of recognition." "You see, I refused to buy the stock." Chicago Record Herald.

Sassenach Humorist (amusing him self at expense of Highland Caddie)—Hoots, ye ken, ma wee bit laddie, you was nae so muckle had a shot the noo. What think ye? The Bit Laddie—Eh! Ah'm thinken ye'll learn Scotch quicker'n ye'll ever learn gouf.—Punch.
