him will not soon forget the shriveled, drawn face, the hollow neck and chest, the stoop to the shoulders and the unmistakable look of illness that shadowed his features and every move during the fifteen or twenty minutes he faced the business men who gathered to hear what he had to say of western railroad rates. Several among those present had met Mr. Harriman a year previous when he came through Salt Lake en route to the northwest. To those few the change in the man from an appearance of health and a certain degree of wireness to what looked like an apparition of a man was even more apparent. When here the last time Mr. Harriman had just come from a three weeks' vacation on his California ranch, and yet he was unmistakably a sick man—his every gesture and utterance was obviously an effort.

It seems a little harsh, perhaps, to read that men are gambling over the recovery or non-recovery of a man from what may prove a fatal illness. But it is the price that men like Harriman must pay one time or another for the wealth they have gained and their strategic and powerful positions in the country's financial world.

MR. FREED'S SUCCESSOR.

Rnor Spry has announced the appointment of J. Carstensen to the place on the State Fair Commission, made vacant by Lester Freed's resignation, following the latter's declination to toady to President McDonald's wishes in everything connected with the work of the commission.

The new appointment has not exactly sent the horsemen who are most interested in the meet at the coming fair, into fits of joy. Much as they admire Mr. Carstensen personally, they say he scarcely fills the bill of an experienced race meet director and it is understood a petition will be presented to President McDonald asking him to appoint a practical race meet man to manage that end of the intermountain exposition this fall.

If it is consistent with the latest methods of chocolate dipping and won't interfere with the canning of the cocoa, Mr. McDonald will probably do this.

Let us hope that C. W. Mount's threat to "go back on the road" will not take definite form. He stated at the manufacturers' meeting—the same meeting in which he said that his company always put so many gallons of something in their barrels—that if this state passed a law against the use of preservatives in pickles, he'd move or go back on the road.

It is to be sincerely hoped that he will do neither as his popularity almost equals that of his pickles, and it would be a shame for citizen Mount to get sour on the town. In speaking of putting fifteen gallons of something in a barrel, Mr. Mount referred strictly to his pickle factory.

"A Texan named Adolfo Esola stops a runaway on Market street," says a San Francisco newspaper. A Texan named Adolfo Esola! Who says we are not a cosmopolitan people?

Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy acknowledges to 88 years. Surely, there must be something miraculous in Christian Science when it induces a woman to confess to an age like that.
