"The Never Substituted"

THE MARKET AND THE MINES

Readers of the daily papers have been wondering who was at the bat when a certain notable strike was made at Park City last week. This and other important questions have been raised by the utterances of the mining editors, questions that call for the patience of a Philadelphia lawyer as well as the skill of a Sherlock Holmes. There is prima facie evidence that the strike was made on a lode mining claim named, styled, called and designated as the Andes. It is also the consensus of opinion that the said strike was made in a drift at a depth of 1,500 to 1,600 feet from the surface. Further than this, there is no unanimity of sentiment—no agreed statement of facts. According to some of the papers, the discovery was made by the Silver King Consolidated Mining company. Other reputable publications testify that, to the best of their knowledge and belief the Silver King Coalition Mines company is the discoverer. Some of the witnesses aver that the new-found ore is headed for the Silver King Consolidated's exclusive ground and others affirm that it is making a bee line for the individual territory of the Silver King Coalition. One reads in the Tribune that the ore runs 400 ounces silver, 48 per cent lead and $3.80 in gold to the ton. The Herald says the assays show about 66 per cent lead, 180 ounces silver, $6 in gold and 3.1 per cent copper.

It has been suggested that there may have been two strikes on the Andes claim; the Silver King Consolidated panhandling one side of the street while the Silver King Coalition worked the other side. The theory has also been propounded that there was ill feeling between the companies which led the friends of one to ignore the accomplishments of its rival. This, however, is incredible for everyone knows that the King Coalition and the King Consolidated are partners—joint owners of the Andes, Vesuvius and other claims. The friendship of Damon and Pythias was a Corsican vendetta compared with the ties of affection between the two Park City Kings. Perish the thought that aught but amity could exist between them! They are closely attached, one to another—so closely attached that it requires the united efforts of the federal courts and a corps of lawyers to pry them apart. Alphonse Consolidated insists that Gaston Coalition shall take precedence in the matter of rendering an accounting for ore alleged to have been taken from the Andes and the Vesuvius.

"After you, my dear Alphonse," persists Gaston Coalition, "I implore you to settle first. I derived no profits from the ore mined in the Vesuvius and I have taken no ore at all from the Andes."

Speaking seriously, the disclosure made in the King Consolidated drift in the Andes, is a great thing for both the owning companies and for the Park City district as well. From a sentimental standpoint it is the more gratifying to the Silver King Consolidated because it is the first strike of marketable ore made by that company, but actually the Silver King Coalition will share equally in the reward. At the time this is written the high-grade has not been opened in great volume, but enough has been shown to convince every old miner that the 24-inch rich streak will lead without fail to one of those mammoth ore bodies upon which Park's fame is founded.

The Silver King Consolidated people have spent a heap of money in developing their property—nearly a quarter of a million, one shareholder said—without shipping a pound of ore. A quarter of a million is not an extravagant sum to spend in development, as mines grow in Park, but it is a good deal to spend without getting anything to show for it. The King Consolidated
