AN UNDISPUTED CLAIM.

American Eagle—"My pole, anyway."

Paul Elder and Company, San Francisco, will soon publish in several suitable bindings, The Remembrance Guest Book, by Arthur Guiterman and Robert Wilson Hyde. It is to be a reproduction, in a smaller, convenient size, of the Craftsman Guest Book, recently issued by the same publisher. Mr. Guiterman's text is a series of couplets and quatrains of hospitalities done with delightful simplicity and an Elizabethan tone perfectly in harmony with the illuminations of Mr. Hyde.

More How To Tell.

Robert Williams Wood, whose nature homologies have taken standard place in the past few years, is to publish through Paul Elder and Company, San Francisco, a novel adaptation of his work, being How To Tell Your Partners for dinners, card parties and other social functions. Both his Birds and Flowers and Animal Analogues will appear in new editions for the fall trade.

The statement of Miss Florence Gale regarding the experiences of herself and other members of "The Power of Love" company on the Pelton and Smutzer "tank" circuit is interesting, showing another phase of the P. & S. concern which every two or three weeks threatens to invade Salt Lake with so many high class attractions that all the other managers will have to do some tall hustling to keep alive.

This Pelton and Smutzer combination is probably the most humorous sketch team in the managerial end of the business, and every public announcement they make is hailed with glee by those who have watched theatrical movements in the west.

"The Power of Love" is a "tank" drama similar to many of the P. & S. plowheel circuit, but the shameful treatment the stranded actors received, according to their statements, ought to serve as a warning to those who contemplate taking a trip on the P. & S. air line.

THE GIRL QUESTION?

There's no more vital one for the housewife. And by the way—it's answered through the Herald-Republican want ads daily.
